BALTIMORE, July 10.—At last the agony is over. With many expressions of extreme disgust, with some weak and vain attempts to hike the dose, the Democracy have swallowed Greeley, Brown and the Cincinnati platform. From first to last this affair has been the ghastliest of political shows. From beginning to end there has hardly been an endeavor to disguise the truth that only because of the delusion that through Greeley lies the only way to repeat at Washington the achievements of the Tammany gang in New-York, Greeley has been taken Already it is apparent, the Democracy have abandoned the plan of trying to rush their puppet through by a burst of popular enthusiasm, and that their sole reliance is upon the discipline of the party which has so often carried the organization into absurdities and political crimes.

THE DISMAL SCENE OPENS.

When the Convention assembled at 10 o'clock this morning, it was evident that the session was to be more intolerable than that of the previous day. The day was much warmer, and although the building was no more crowded than on the prior occasion, the session being held in the middle of the day, the heat was dangerously intense. There was a manifest desire to get through as soon as possible, and Doolittle calling to order promptly, the report of the Committee on Resolutions, which was the Cincinnati platform verbatim, was read at once. It was greeted with a few shouts from the delegates and with applause from the galleries, but the portion which met with most enthusiasm was that which declared that no President should be re-elected, the Democracy evidently being delighted that they were not to have two doses of Greeley. At the conclusion of the reading a score of men jumped up and yelled, and there were cheers from about half the delegates.

THE GAG APPLIED.

Mr. Burr, of Connecticut, Chairman of the Committee, then announced that this platform had been adopted with only the dissenting votes of Delaware, Georgia and Mississippi, and moved the previous question on its adoption by the Convention. Instantly there was a scene of great confusion, and all attempts to keep the disintegrating influences which are at work in the Democratic ranks out of sight were futile. Senator Bayard, of Delaware, rose to a question of order, and bitterly protested against the gag law being enforced upon the Democracy, but he was ruled down by Doolittle. A dozen other members sprung up in different parts of the house to join in the protest, but Doolittle ruled all debate out of order, and after some minutes of wild confusion, the roll-call of the States on sustaining the previous question was proceeded with. There was some disorder during the call, but it was finally concluded and the result announced as 553 yeas to 176 nays.

DISSENSION READY TO BREAK OUT.

The previous question being sustained, Burr had an hour under the rules to close the debate, which had not been allowed, and he gave ten minutes to Mr. Bayard. That gentleman spoke from the platform, making a strong argument for the true Democracy, and against the surrender to Greeley, which was greeted with cheers and hisses. At this moment, it was observable that the Convention had so little of heartiness in its work that if a strong, magnetic speaker like Voorhees, of Indiana, had been in the place of Bayard, the Greeley conspiracy might have been defeated. Bayard had his time extended, so that he spoke altogether twenty minutes, but without much effect, as his voice was not powerful enough to fill the house. After him O'Connor, of South Carolina, made a stirring appeal for the surrender, in which he managed to show that the Democracy had been totally wrong on every political issue for the last twenty years. After him Reagan, of Texas, who was Jeff. Davis' Postmaster-General, made an appeal in behalf of the ballot of his rebel master, after which many of the delegates, remembering former sports began to call "time." There was then a demand that the resolutions should be voted upon separately, which was met with cries of "No," "No," from the venal majority. The call of States then commenced, but the Alabama delegation, the first, wanting to explain, an objection being made, refused to vote. The call proceeded, and during its progress showed the following negative votes: Delaware, 6; Georgia, 19; Mississippi, 9; Missouri, 2; New-Jersey, 9; Oregon, 6; Pennsylvania, 7, and West Virginia, 2, with nine in Tennessee which were not allowed to be counted in consequence of the whole vote being cast at the discretion of the majority. There was great confusion during the call, the votes of the several States being greeted with cheers and hisses, and the result was at last announced as—Yeas 670, nays 62.

HOFFMAN'S LITTLE DODGE.

There was then a motion made and adopted to go into the nomination of President, whereupon Gov. Hoffman made a desperate attempt to manufacture some Greeley enthusiasm, by handing up a roll of a paper which he said was signed by 15,000 Germans of the City of New-York who would support Greeley and Brown. But those who were upon the platform were inconsiderate enough to allow this document for the sake of effect to be unrolled and stretched through the house. Thereby everybody could see that it was about 100 feet long, and those who were near enough to scan the thing, saw that the names were half an inch apart. This raised grave doubts of the verpeity of the Governor of New-York, as a slight calculation showed that there could not be more than 2,500 names appended to the resolution praying for Greeley.

THE NEXT THING ON THE PROGRAMME.

After this the nomination—which was a [illegible] with only a few [illegible]tes began upon the [illegible]or President. Alabama, and, of course, led [illegible]. There was a desire to surrender with éclat. [illegible] to their feet and [illegible] a general idea that [illegible] there were loud [illegible] Sunset Cox was [illegible] calling up the New-Yorkers, but without much success. The start was a failure, and the nomination was destined to prove a failure to the end. Presently Delaware showed the latent disaffection by giving her six votes to James A. Bayard. Florida cast 2 blank and Georgia 4 blank. There was an attempt to get up a scene over the 42 of Illinois for Greeley, which was a failure, and a like result attended a like effort when Iowa was called and voted solid for the "Sage."

THE CLIMAX OF DULLNESS.

Here the pivotal-point of this scene of prepared enthusiasm, which it was expected would be unparalleled, was reached. John T. Hoffman was the man of most renown in this Convention. Of national reputation, impressive presence and great power in rousing large masses of men, it was expected that his speech, when New-York was called, would at least stir this Convention into something approaching the grand display at Philadelphia. Through all the roll-call down to this point, it had been whispered through the house, "Wait for New-York. Wait until Hoffman speaks, then let us all get up and yell." But it was beyond Hoffman's power to revive a corpse. The man who had so often roused living assemblages to the highest point saw his words fall without power upon this mass before him. Twice or thrice a few feeble cheers greeted him, and when he concluded, and announced seventy votes for Horace Greeley, not more than 200 of all that body of delegates rose to their feet and cheered. There was nothing approaching even a general outburst of applause. After this failure the ballot went on with even less of life. Presently Pennsylvania was reached, and unexpectedly to all, its vote was announced as only 35 for Greeley, 21 for Jeremiah S. Black, and two blank. This was a damper, and from this point out the Convention never revived from the shock. True, all the votes except two given by West Virginia for Groesbeck were given to Greeley, and it was evident he was the nominee of the Democratic Party for President of the United States by more than the two-thirds required by the long-established usages of the party; but there was no joy in that fact, or if there was it was concealed with most consummate art. Here let me say distinctly, without any intention to color the truth in the least degree, that I watched this scene down to this point closely; I watched it for the purpose of stating plainly the facts as I could see them, and that having so watched I must say that, although occasionally there had been cheers, and that one or two occasions perhaps a third of the Convention had risen and yelled with some degree of vigor, and although from the start there was an evident straining for enthusiasm that never appeared, yet from first to last there was nothing that with a strict regard to truth could be called a general outburst of applause.

NOT UNANIMOUS.

The vote was announced, 687 for Greeley, 18 for Bayard, 2 for Groesbeck, and the remainder blank, and then there were general cries through the house for Pennsylvania, as it was expected that with this State wheeling solid into line for Greeley, the long desired display of popular enthusiasm would be had. Wallace, of the Keystone State, went to the platform, and commencing in his best style, which is always good, sought to revivify the dead mass before him. He spoke of the power and the majority of the State; he spoke of the certainty of its deliverance from Republican rule, and he closed by moving to make the nomination of Greeley unanimous. There were shouts again from a third of the house, but there were none of those unequivocal marks that this nomination sprung from the popular heart which were manifest to the dullest and most prejudiced observer of that glorious scene at the Academy of Music in Philadelphia. It was noticeable that the negative of this question was not put, and that Delaware and the nine votes of New-Jersey were never recounted. They went out from that Convention as they went into it, with an unalterable opposition to Greeley, his works and his ways.

COMIC CLOSE OF THE TRAGEDY.

The management had one card left. At this juncture there was a feeble imitation of Philadelphia. Those who witnessed that magnificent spectacle will remember that after the nomination of Grant a scene was let down at the back of the stage representing the nation's savior upon horseback, and will remember how that vast audience rose as if mad, and now mighty cheers shook the walls of that vast edifice. Here the imitation was so feeble as to be jocose. There was a scene dropped down at the back of the stage, it was an old property of the theatre, which was supposed to represent the White House, and the audience was required by a violent stretch of the imagination to suppose that "honest old Horace," with the Tammany gang behind him, was inside it. Nothing could have been more absurd than this. Instead of cheers there was a general laugh, and this last card also was a total failure.

THE CAUDAL APPENDAGE.

Having swallowed Greeley, the Convention proceeded to bolt B. Gratz Brown with something more of ease. On the call of the States he had 713 votes. Delaware, steadfast to principle, gave her six votes to Stevenson, of Kentucky, and the remainder were blank. Glad to get rid of this unpleasant task, prostrated by the herculean undertaking of transforming Horace Greeley into a Democratic candidate, and with much delight that it had succeeded in the effort, this Convention of the Democracy streamed perspiring into the hot sun of the noonday, and thus this farcial Convention of 1872 came to an end.

THE HONEST MEN OF THE PARTY.

During these expiring agonies of the Democratic Party at the Opera-house, the handful of the faithful had been waiting at the Maryland Institute for the result which every one knew was certain. As soon as it was positively ascertained the meeting was formally called to order by the temporary Chairman, Joseph R. Flanders, the Committee on Permanent Organization presented the following report: For President, Hon. Samuel J. Bayard, of New-Jersey; for Vice-Presidents, Ed. F. Stokes, of South Carolina: James Sweeny, of Pennsylvania; Ezra Kiser, of Texas, and Jesse Miller, of West Virginia.

For Secretaries, James Sherwood, of Connecticut, and T. J. Clute, of New-York. The report was unanimously adopted, and a committee was appointed to conduct Mr. Bayard to the chair. The Chairman, who was received with cheers, said: We are assembled here in obedience to the wishes of a very respectable portion of the Democratic Party in our respective States, to resist the attempt that has been made to destroy Democracy. A conspiracy now culminating in the accomplishment of one of its chief objects—a conspiracy for the dissolution of our party—has been formed and in operation for months, and to resist and defeat that conspiracy we are here today. [Applause.] We consider ourselves as representing vast masses of the Democratic Party whose voices have not been heard in this contest, who have not had an opportunity to express their opinions respecting this foul conspiracy to which I refer. These masses are imperfectly represented in that great Convention at the Opera-house, which is accomplishing these purposes of the conspirators. You have heard from these conspirators again and again that Democracy was a standing menace to the country, and you have heard them say that it must cease to exist. For that purpose it was called upon to indorse the platform and the nominees of Cincinnati. We are here to defeat all nefarious purposes of that sort. We desire to lift aloft the old flag and fling back defiance upon those who would heap so many indignities upon us. But a political coalition of this nature cannot succeed. It never did. When Greeley was nominated at Cincinnati it was received with contempt all over the country, but gradually these manipulations took place, and now they call upon us to indorse his nomination. He concluded by expressing his firm conviction that the honest Democrats of the nation would never permit their party to be destroyed in this way. [Applause.]

ADDRESS TO THE DEMOCRACY.

The Committee on Address reported the following, which was unanimously adopted:

In view of the action which has this day been taken by the Democratic National Convention, sitting in this City at the Opera-house, in the adoption of a platform, in its main features distinctively Republican, and the nomination as a candidate for the Presidency of a man, who for years has been the most bitter and implacable enemy of the Democratic Party, this conference of Democrats from different States of the Union has been convened, to take such action as the honor and safety of the Democratic cause and the interest of the country demand, and as a preliminary to and a justification of our proper action, we hereby declare:

That the aforesaid proceedings of the said National Convention are a virtual dissolution of the hitherto existing organization of the Democratic Party. That they are an unconditional abandonment of the principles of the Democratic Party and the acceptance of such as are conflicting and irreconcilable with them. That by this action the said Convention as claiming to represent the Democratic Party, has been false to its obligation of duty, to principles, to regard for consistence, and to every sentiment of political honor; and as it can represent the Democratic Party only by adhering to its principles, and can make nominations which Democrats are bound to support only by naming candidates who are known and recognized Democrats, therefore the action which it has taken, so far from being binding as the action of the Democratic Party, should be spurned by all true Democrats and resisted with unyielding tenacity and to the utmost extremity. Denying that Democracy is dead or that it can ever die while the principles of our fathers are cherished by even a few devoted hearts, we seize and again fling to the breeze for a l true Democrats to rally around the banner so faithlessly lowered, and pledge our undying devotion to the principles which it represents, deeming those principles to involve living and enduring issues.

That the system of Government established by our fathers was a Federal Union of coequal States. That we hold to the doctrines of State Rights and of a strict construction of the Federal Constitution, as defined by Thomas Jefferson, believing their effective recognition to be indispensable to the maintenance of free political institutions and the perpetuation of popular liberty in this country, and to those essential principles of government enumerated by him in his first inaugural address, especially applicable to our time and condition, consisting of the admirable and ever-important propositions—"Equal and exact justice to all men, of whatever State or persuasion, religious or political;" "peace, commerce and honest friendship with all nations, entangling alliances with none;" "a well-disciplined militia our best reliance in peace and for the first moments of war till regulars may relieve them;" "the supremacy of the civil over the military authority;" "freedom of religion;" "freedom of the Press;" "freedom of the person under the protection of the habeas corpus;" "trial by juries impartially selected;" to which should be added what Mr. Jefferson defined as "the sum of good government," "a wise and frugal Government, which shall restrain men from injuring one another; which shall leave them otherwise free to regulate their own pursuits of industry and improvement, and shall not take from the mouth of labor the bread it has earned."

We recommend our Democratic fellow-citizens in the several States to form Democratic State organizations, and do all in their power to check the growing defection from true Democratic principles; and we further suggest and recommend that a Convention be held at Louisville, Ky., on Saturday, the 3d of September, 1872, to take such steps as may be deemed prudent and essential.

Mr. Bitley made a proposition to proceed to the nomination of a candidate for President and Vice-President of the United States, but by consent it was laid upon the table. Mr. Pickmore moved that the following be incorporated in the platform:

1st.—An act of universal amnesty and the restoration of political rights.

2d.—The repeal of all acts injuriously affecting the Southern States.

3d.—The extension of the Franchise laws to the soldiers of the South.

4th.—Payment for the liberated slaves from the National Treasury.

5th.—A change in the national flag to make it acceptable to the people of the whole country.

Mr. Flanders said this was not the place to entertain the motion just then, and it was withdrawn. The meeting then adjourned.

A WRETCHED CREW.

Without faith in the present, without encouragement for the future, ashamed of what they have done, fearful that they will have no recompense for the sacrifice which they have made, the Democratic delegates this evening are scattering to their homes. Horace Greeley has been bolted, swallowed without question, but he sits uneasy upon the Democratic stomach, and with the call for the Louisville Convention staring them in the face as they departed they went to their homes with a fear that their abandonment of principle, their acceptance of their greatest enemy for their candidate, had been without avail. SCENES AND INCIDENTS.

Applying the Gag—Vigorous but Ineffectual Kicking During the Operation.

A. E. Burr, Chairman of the Committee on Resolutions, announced that the Committee were ready to report, and asked the clerk to read in the first place the introductory paragraph of the report, which is all of the report written by the Committee, and has already been printed. Mr. Burr continued after the rest of the report had been read: Mr. Chairman, these resolutions embrace the Cincinnati platform, word for word; nothing taken from it, nothing added, except the short preamble. The resolutions were adopted by every State in this Union except four, viz.: Delaware, Mississippi, Georgia and Oregon. Having been adopted with that unusual degree of unanimity, Mr. President, I move the adoption of the resolutions as a whole, and on that motion I move the previous question.

The PRESIDENT—Mr. Burr, of the Committee on Resolutions, reports from that Committee a platform and moves its adoption, and on that motion he asks the previous question.

Senator BAYARD, of Delaware—I rise to a question of order. Has the previous question—another name for gag-law—become the law of a Democratic Convention, without notice to the delegates? [Loud cries of "No," and cheers and hisses.]

The PRESIDENT—The Chair overrules the point of order. The pending question is not debatable, but the Chair deems it proper to state that the Convention has adopted, by unanimous vote, as the rules to govern its proceedings, the rules of the House of Representatives. The motion for the previous question is in order under one of those rules, which are essential to the transaction of business in large bodies of men.

Senator BAYARD, of Delaware—I ask that the Chairman withdraw his call for the previous question for the period of at least ten minutes, that the minority may be heard. [Cries of "No," and much confusion.]

The PRESIDENT—The appeal is made by the gentleman from Delaware to the Chairman of the Committee on Resolutions, and not to anybody else.

Mr. BAILEY, of Pennsylvania—I second the appeal in behalf of the delegation from Pennsylvania. [Cries of "Question."]

Mr. BURR—I would concede what the gentleman asks with the greatest pleasure, but I am under instructions from the Committee and cannot yield the point, and must insist upon the motion I make.

Senator BAYARD—I wish to appeal to the sense of manhood of the Democratic Party, and appeal to the self-respect. Are you deaf to the voice of reason? [Confusion.]

The PRESIDENT—The gentleman from Delaware will come to order.

Hon. G. SAULSBURY, of Delaware—I say this proceeding is unfair. It is unjust to the Democracy of this country.

The PRESIDENT—The question is, Will the House sustain the previous question? [Cries of "Yes" and "No."]

A DELEGATE—Call the roll of States.

The PRESIDENT—The Secretary will call the roll. The roll call resulted in 578 yeas, 159 nays, as follows:

YEAS—Alabama, 10; Arkansas, 12; California, 12; Connecticut, 12; Florida, 6; Georgia, 1; Illinois, 42; Indiana, 30; Iowa, 22; Kansas, 10; Kentucky, 34; Louisiana, 6; Maine, 14; Maryland, 14; Massachusetts, 28; Michigan, 22; Minnesota, 10; Missouri, 26; Nebraska, 6; New-Hampshire, 10; New-York, 74; North Carolina, 20; Ohio, 44; Pennsylvania, 37; Rhode Island, 8; South Carolina, 3; Tennessee, 24; Texas, 16; Vermont, 10; Virginia, 22; West Virginia, 6; Wisconsin, 20.

NAYS—Alabama, 10; Delaware, 6. [When Delaware was called, Mr. Saulsbury said: "We vote no, Sir, now and forever."] Florida, 2; Georgia, 21; Louisiana, 10; Maryland, 2; Mississippi, 16; Missouri, 4; Nevada, 6; New-Jersey, 18; Oregon, 6; Pennsylvania, 21; South Carolina, 11; West Virginia, 4.

THE SCREWS TIGHTENED.

Before the question on adopting the resolutions was taken, Mr. McRae, of Tennessee said: I rise to a question of privilege. I insist upon being heard. It is a question of privilege. [Cries of "Sit down." "Shut up."]

The PRESIDENT—What is the gentleman's question of privilege?

Mr. MCRAE—When I was in the last Democratic Convention, in 1860—[Cries of "Sit down; that belongs to the past."] The question is this: I want to offer my protest against this centralization through the instrumentality of a Committee, by which free thought and free utterance in a Democratic assembly composed of representatives from all parts of the country——

Mr. FAULKNER, of New York, (interposing,) said—I arise to a point of order. It is not a question of privilege for a gentleman to enter a protest, under the form of debating a question that is closed.

The PRESIDENT—The gentleman from Tennessee is out of order.

Mr. MCRAE—I want to say another word on the question of privilege. [Loud cries of "No, no."]

The PRESIDENT—The Secretary will call the roll.

The Secretary then called the roll of States, upon motion for the adoption of the report of the Committee on Resolutions, with the following result—yeas, 670; nays, 62.

THE VOTES ON PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATES.

The roll call being concluded, the President directed the clerk to read the result of the vote, which was as follows:

Whole number of votes cast	722
Horace Greeley received	686
(Great applause.)
James A. Bayard, of Delaware	15
Jeremiah Black, of Pennsylvania	21
William S. Groesbeck, of Ohio	2
Blank	8

A motion to make the vote unanimous, failed.

The result of the vote for Vice-President was as follows:

For Vice-President, whole number of votes	732
For B. Gratz Brown	713
For John W. Stevenson, of Kentucky	6
Blank votes	13

Mr. Chalmers, of Mississippi, moved that the nomination be made unanimous, which was agreed to without a dissenting voice.

ADJOURNMENT SINE DIE.

The Reading Clerk announced that there would be in the evening at 8 o'clock a grand ratification-meeting at Monument-square, and then, on motion, the Convention, at 1½, adjourned sine die.

A DIFFICULT TASK.

Immediately after the adjournment of the Convention, the Committee appointed to notify Mr. Greeley and Mr. Brown of their nomination by the Convention held a meeting, Hon. J. R. Doolittle, Chairman, and L. P. Fenlon, Secretary, and appointed the following Subcommittee to prepare a letter to the nominees, to be submitted to the full Committee this P. M., viz: James S. Thayer, of New-York; Judge J. C. Abbott, of Massachusetts; James Chesnut, of South Carolina, John C. Burch, of Tennessee; A. M. Miller, of Illinois.

On motion of Judge Abbott, it was resolved that the Committee proceed in a body to New-York and present the letter to Mr. Greeley. Should Mr. Brown be in New-York at the time, the Committee will also wait on him.

The Woman Suffragists Repelled With Scorn.

BALTIMORE, Md., July 10.—Isabella Beecher Hooker, of Connecticut; Susan B. Anthony, of New-York, and Laura De Force Gordon, of California, who have been in attendance on the Convention, hoping to obtain from the Democratic Party a broader recognition of their right to vote than was given by the Republican Convention at Philadelphia, are very much disappointed by the utter rejection of their claims by the Baltimore Convention, and declare their intention of working for the Philadelphia platform and its nominees.

THE NATIONAL COMMITTEE.

Augustus Schell Chosen Chairman—Meeting of the Committee Last Night.

BALTIMORE, July 10.—At a meeting of the National Democratic Committee this afternoon, all the members being present except from the States of Delaware and Florida, Hon. Augustus Schell, of New-York, was elected permanent Chairman, and Hon. F. O. Prince, of Massachusetts, was re-elected permanent Secretary and Treasurer. The following gentlemen were elected members of the Executive Committee: Theodore F. Randolph, of New-Jersey; Cyrus H. McCormick, of Illinois; Wm. A. Moore, of Michigan; Isaac E. Eaton, of Kansas; Frederick O. Prince, of Massachusetts; John G. Thompson, of Ohio; James P. Barr, of Pennsylvania; Wm H. Barnum, of Connecticut; Mathew W. Ransom, of North Carolina; Daniel W. L. Bate, of Tennessee.

The Chairman of the National Executive Committee was made a member of the committee ex-officio.

The following gentlemen compose the resident Democratic Committee at Washington: Samuel J. Randall, of Pennsylvania; W. W. Corcoran, of Washington; Allen G. Thurman, of Ohio; James Brooks, of New-York; and Montgomery Blair, of Maryland.

IN THIS CITY.

Reception of the News—Tammany Responds to the Nomination of the Baltimore Convention.

About ten minutes after the news of Greeley and Brown's nomination at Baltimore reached the City, the guns of Tammany Hall belched out a hundred guns in the City Hall Park. "Tammany responds to the nomination of the Baltimore Convention" was painted upon a canvas banner planted near the scene of the firing. Flags were hoisted upon the City Hall by Tammany's orders, upon the Tribune buildings and by the newspapers notorious for a partial and total suppression of the Tammany frauds. The noise of the cannon attracted the crowds usually drawn to the Park upon the occasion of the firing of a salute, and among them were many loud-mouthed champions of the man once honored by the Republican Party, when he was believed to be swayed by principle, and not a selfish desire of his own personal advancement, as is now so palpable to every one.

There were many readers of the newspaper bulletins, and the comments made upon the news were curious.

"What do you think about it?" said one man to his friend.

"Well, I suppose I'll have to vote for him, as he is the nominee of my party; but all that I have to say about is, that there is nothing in his favor but his availability."

Another gentleman, a Democrat, read the announcement again and again, as though there might be something wrong about it, and then walked slowly away, shaking his head mournfully.

Said one gentleman to another, in front of the TIMES bulletin, "How can we, as honest men, support this man? Why, there is not a thief in the City but who is in favor of his election."

"A worse representative of the Democratic sentiment of the country could not have been selected," said the other. These sentiments were seemingly reciprocated by every Democrat of acknowledged standing and probity encountered during the day.

A rush was made by a promiscuous crowd, while the guns were firing, for the Tribune office. It was soon flooded by the rough and ready gathering, who evidently anticipated the fun of a speech from Horace. They were not gratified, however, and they amused themselves by poking fun at the Tammany candidate. "Here's Horace. Hello! Horace. How do you do?" some of them would say to attract the attention of the others. There would then be a pushing and turning of heads, and finally a general guffaw at the joke. Several attempts were made to raise a cheer for the "Chappaquack" philosopher in the office, but each time it was a failure. It was impossible to raise anything but a laugh, and there was a broad grin upon the faces of everybody.

The gentlemen employed behind the counter looked upon these proceedings as though they were not relished, and to judge from the expression of their faces, seemed to think that their chief was in some way making himself ridiculous. A man with a shocking bad hat made a rambling speech to the rabble in the Park, and was cheered. This was the only cheering heard during the Tammany explosion. The officials in the City Hall, however, were full with delight. Several of them were seen dancing an extravagant can can in the lobby. The employes in Mayor Hall's office were prepared, they said, to bet fabulous amounts on Greeley's election. The same enthusiasm prevailed among the Tammany office-holders in the Sheriff's office, the County Clerk's and in the various Courts. These officials look on Greeley as their savior and have a mistaken idea that he is to be elected and they are to secure a new lease of office. Every Tammany man met on the street beamed with smiles. Were Horace Greeley an honest temperance reformer he would sunddler at the amount of rum consumed by his Tammany friends over the realization of their fondest wishes—a realization which their leaders had planned and worked for a year ago.

Broken, crushed and driven to hide themselves from the public gaze and probable punishment, the Tammany Ring exulted yesterday in a hopeful anticipation of a chance of fortune, and their tribe of dependents were ready to shout hallelujahs to the man they have always despised, who has turned his back upon honest men.

Leaving the City Hall yesterday, and plunging into the slums of the City, every where the news was heard, and it spread rapidly. Tammany was found to respond to the nomination of the Baltimore Convention through the guzzling Tammany mouth-pieces of these localities, who, while they debauch the miserable people of their neighborhoods, at the same time use them to corrupt our City politics.

The rum-sellers of Mackerelville, the Five Points, Water-street, Greene-street, the Fourth Ward Murderers' Row, Houston-street, and Bleecker-street, with some remarkable exceptions, "responded to the nomination of the Baltimore Convention." The inhabitants of Battlerow also responded.

Every gaming hell in the City responded, and so did Tweed, Sweeny, Hall, Norton, Genet, Bradley, Billy Cooke, Corson and the long list of Tammany plunderers whose names were made notorious in the TIMES. All of these men indorsed the nomination of the Baltimore Convention yesterday.

While the Tammany guns were thundering out their salute and the Tammany gang were "responding to the Baltimore nominations," and congratulating each other upon the choice of candidates, the Philosopher of many ideas was up town, surrounded by a small body of soreheads, waiting for the telegram announcing the anticipated action of the Convention. He was at the Glenham Hotel head-quarters in the morning, and then retired to the Lincoln Club, where the news reached him. He smiled, and was pleased over it, and appeared to feel no regretful pangs at the thought that he was now the standard-bearer of that corrupt Tammany Hall which he once professed to be opposed to, but with whom it would now appear he has been secretly in friendship.

At Greeley head-quarters, yesterday, only two men were present when the news of the Baltimore nomination was received. These two were asleep, and the noise of the firing of cannon in City Hall Park broke their slumbers but for a moment. They rolled over lazily, and soon the sound of their snoring was the only interruption to the prevailing quiet.

THE NEUTRAL GROUND.

Sentiments of the Chicago Times on the Present Political Situation.

CHICAGO, July 10.—The Times of this morning, in a leader based on the assumption that the Baltimore Convention will today nominate Greeley and Brown, announces adherence to its views heretofore expressed in regard to Greeley, and says it cannot and will not espouse his cause or labor for his election. It says Greeley is now the candidate of the Democratic Party, so far as he can be made such, a fact which it regards as a hard one, but which cannot be ignored. It is also a fact that the choice of the people must be either for Greeley or Grant. The question as to how Democrats shall vote in this contingency, the Times says, is one to be decided by individual voters themselves, inasmuch as the action of the Baltimore Convention has not placed Democrats under the slightest obligation to vote for Greeley, one of the worst embodiments of radicalism the country has ever known. At the same time it is clearly the duty of every Democrat to give himself with renewed devotion to the work of rescuing local Governments and the legislative branch of the General Government from the grasp of Radicals.

The article concludes as follows: "Holding these opinions and this duty of Democrats in view of the hard alternative now presented, the Times, while it cannot and will not give to Mr. Greeley any positive support, even as the lesser evil, while it washes its hands of all responsibility for his election, if he shall be elected, will support with redoubled zeal and vigor all Reform candidates for State offices and for Congress—all whom it regards as fitted by their principles, abilities and characters to exert a wholesome conservative influence upon the next Administration, whether it be Grant or Greeley. More could not be accomplished under different auspices, but that fact only strengthens the motive to do everything it is still possible to do to arrest bad and dangerous tendencies of the times, and cleanse the policy and measures of the Government."

LONG BRANCH.

How the News of the Nomination was Received—Feeling of the Democrats.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

LONG BRANCH, July 10.—The nomination of Mr. Greeley at Baltimore has failed to elicit any enthusiasm whatever, with one exception. Mr. Frank Leslie, of Day's Doings' notoriety, fired a salute of one hundred Chinese bombs, in honor of the event, in front of the Ocean Hotel, much to the annoyance of the dancers inside. He succeeded in nearly overturning several carriages and stages, but did not succeed in raising a single cheer. On the appearance of the police he hurriedly retired. A few Democrats are trying to look and feel easy, but their jollification is far too much like a funeral feeling. They seem to feel that, let them try as they may to wash down their unsavory and indigestable meal, they cannot keep off political dyspepsia in November.

ILLINOIS.

Desperate Attempt at Enthusiasm Among the Democrats.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., July 10.—The Democrats had a ratification meeting this evening, indorsing the action of the Baltimore Convention. A salute was fired from a very small gun, and $10 worth of fire-works were burned. Judge Trumbull was the principal speaker at the meeting. His speech consisted of a tirade against Grant and the Civil Service Reform bill, and in laudations of Horace Greeley. A very noticeable feature of the meeting was the absence of those Republicans who had heretofore gone off after strange gods. The laborers in this State have almost entirely repudiated the attempted coalition. The meeting was a very small affair.

VIRGINIA.

Gloomy Attempt at a Ratification Meeting—Coldness with Which the Nomination of the Tammany Candidate is Received.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

RICHMOND, Va., July 10.—The news of the nomination of Greeley and Brown was received here today by the Greeleyites according to a matured programme. A piece of infant artillery was promptly carried to Capitol-square, where a number of rounds were fired, which were quite audible to all who were in the square, or who were not very far off. A mass meeting in front of Virginia Hall, tonight, was the best of the programme, but it was a most ridiculous failure, despite the music made by two dilapidated drums, the noise of the cannon and the burning of a scant supply of indifferent fire-works. The crowd that gathered was laughably small, and was chiefly composed of boys of both colors, and of curious persons on their way home who paused to see what the hideous noise was about. At length after waiting for the multitude that didn't come there were three separate distinct efforts to make a speech by as many persons with as many separate and distinct failures as to the result. I will mention the names of these orators, whom I'll wager neither you nor your readers ever heard of before. They were Messrs. F. W. Mahood, W. W. Cosby and A. Q. Holliday. The whole thing was so lame, impotent and farcical that at an early hour it was announced by Mr. K. Mahood that this was a mere spontaneous running together of the people to manifest their abounding joy at the nomination of Greeley, and that the Grand ratification meeting would take place Friday night. He concluded the melancholy services by calling for nine cheers for Greeley and Brown, when, lo, there was a deep silence in response. This was broken by the uproar of the musical Department who created. Hip, hip, hurrah! two or three times, in which about a dozen shrill-voiced boys joined, and others then gloomily dispersed. This and other failures past and to come, are the consequences of putting upon a popular enthusiasm for Greeley that has no real existence.

WASHINGTON NEWS.

Preparations for the Campaign—Tricks of the Tribune—Naval Appropriation.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, July 10.—Political advices received here from Indiana within the past few days are very encouraging for the Republicans. There is a well-grounded belief among the best judges that the State will elect the Republican ticket in October next. This belief is only entertained because of the known facts in regard to the thorough organization of the canvass thus early in the campaign, and because of the vigilant and untiring efforts of the State Committee and its accessions in the counties, towns and districts. An organization by school districts throughout the State is now being perfected, by which concert in action can be secured nearly as perfect as in New-Hampshire. No roseate views of the campaign prevail in Indiana. The Republican workers too well know that nothing but hard work will win the victory. The men of coolest judgment here, among whom are several members of the Administration, view the general situation somewhat as the Indiana Representatives view the situation in that State. They are confident of victory, but expect that it will be achieved only by hard work. What they look to especially for effective aid is local organization, initiated first in the State Committees and running down through to townships and school districts. They look to see this done with unusual energy in the States of New-York and Pennsylvania. They do not mean to be deceived or allow anybody to be deceived by false estimates of Republican strength any more than they mean to be bluffed by the extravagant game of brag which the Greeleyites are now playing. They expect to see hard work done, and know that only will secure victory over a desperate and unscrupulous enemy.

SHARP PRACTICE BY THE REFORM PARTY.

Every now and then the Reform preachers are caught in some contemptible trick which puts to shame all their professions. This time it is two liberal organs, the New-York Tribune and the St. Paul Dispatch. The Tribune prints Sumner's speech as a supplement, and sends it to its feeble country confrères for circulation in their editions, without paying postage. In this case the St. Paul Dispatch sought to change the Tribune supplement into a Dispatch supplement, by printing two turned rules, and the words, "Supplement to the St. Paul Dispatch" over the Tribune title, leaving the rest of the sheet, Tribune, prospectus column, title lines and all just as printed at the Tribune office. A copy of this document having been forwarded to the First Assistant Postmaster-General, it is found to be in direct violation of section 142 of the postal Code, which subjects the entire edition to letter postage, and the proprietor who attempts to circulate it to $5 fine for each document so inclosed and sent through the mails. The Postmaster at St. Paul has been instructed accordingly.

A NAVAL CLAIM.

Yesterday, W. E. Leroy, Earl English and Robert G. F. Lewis, the officers of the Navy appointed by the Judge of the District Court to appraise the value of the rebel ram Albemarle, which was sunk in Wilmington harbor during the war, submitted their report that $282,856 90 is a just and equitable appraisement. The Court made an order that $202 912 be deposited with the Assistant-Treasurer, 79,954 having been previously deposited for distribution.

THE POSTAL CARDS.

Numerous inquiries have been received by the Post-office Department in relation as to when postal cards will be supplied to the public, and if they are at present ready for distribution. As the clerks would have all of their time occupied by answering letters of this kind, the general statement is authoritatively made that the postal cards will not be ready for distribution for at least one month yet. They will be furnished by contract, and advertisements for proposals will be issued by the Department next week.

THE FISK MURDER.

The Evidence for the Defense Concluded.

The Probing Question Again—Rebuttal Testimony —Was Fisk Armed?—The Trial Drawing to a Close.

The heat did not prevent there being the usual curious crowd of spectators in the Court-room and outside in the lobbies of the new Court-house, yesterday, during the proceedings in the trial of Stokes. The mother and sister of the prisoner sat beside him, but with their backs turned to the auditors, many of whom endeavored in vain to see their faces. When the mother of Stokes took the stand there was an expectant silence, but her testimony merely showed that after the Greenpoint oil refinery trouble with Fisk her son carried a pistol always, being, as he said, in fear of his life.

A great part of the day was devoted to trying to find out whether or not Dr. Fisher or Tripler probed for the bullet too deeply, and if they used the proper instruments. The defense closed and the prosecution began its rebuttal by proving, in spite of the objections of the other side, that, on the evidence of a Belgian, Fisk's interpreter, the murdered man was not armed on the day he was shot.

Dr. Thomas H. Tripler was recalled, and testified in answer to Mr. Tremaine:

Q.—Is Taylor on Poisons a recognized authority among medical men? A.—I am not familiar with it; I could not answer that.

Q.—Do you know anything about George Harley's Old Vegetable Neurotics? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—What is the length of the probe you used on Mr. Fisk? A.—Six inches.

Q.—Do you know a man named Marshall Cowing? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—Did you have a conversation with him within three or four days after the death of Fisk? A.—Yes, Sir; he sat next to me at the dinner-table at the Grand Central Hotel.

Q.—Didn't you tell him that your probe was not a proper one, and if you had had the right kind you you would have found the ball? Q.—I don't recollect that.

Q.—Didn't you tell him that you probed the wound before Dr. Fisher came? A.—Very likely I did.

DR. FISHER RECALLED.

Dr. Fisher was then recalled, and testified in answer to Mr. Tremaine:

Q.—I take it for granted that you recognize Taylor on Poisons as an authority? A.—It is, Sir; it is considered a good work on poisons.

Q.—Is it not a standard work on poisons? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—Do you know Marshall Cowing? A.—Yes. Sir.

Q.—Did you have a conversation with him after the death of Fisk? A.—I believe so.

Q.—Didn't you tell him that you put the probe in four inches and touched the ball, and pushed it five inches? A.—Never.

Q.—Didn't you tell him that you pushed the ball at all? No. Sir.

Q.—Did you tell Mr. Cowing that Dr. Tripler had punched away at Fisk half an hour before you arrived? Q.—No, Sir.

Q.—Didn't you have any conversation with him on that subject? A.—I don't recollect it.

Cross-examined by Mr. Beach.—Q.—If any injury had been inflicted by the probing how would it have been manifested? A.—By inflammation; by peritonitis at that point.

Q.—Was any such thing discovered? A.—No, Sir. Marshall Cowing was called, but did not respond.

THE MOTHER OF THE PRISONER TESTIFYING.

Nancy Stokes was sworn, and testified, in answer to Mr. Tremaine:

Q.—You are the mother of the prisoner? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—You have lived here how long? A.—Ten years.

Q.—Came here from Philadelphia? Yes, Sir.

Q.—Do you recollect when your son was put in prison? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—Did you call upon him there? A.—No. Sir.

Q.—Do you recollect his spending some time with your family a year ago? A.—Last year, in June, he was there two or three weeks.

Q.—Did you then discover he had a pistol? A.—I did; he sent his brother Horace for it one day, and I saw it daily on his bed after that.

Q.—Did you discover anything peculiar in his countenance? A.—I did on two or three occasions—when he was talking with his father about his imprisonment—he became excited; his eyes had a wild appearance that I had never seen before.

Q.—What were his social relations with his family? A.—Perfectly agreeable.

TESTIMONY OF HORACE STOKES.

Horace Stokes was sworn, and testified in answer to Mr. Tremaine: I am a brother of the prisoner; am twenty years of age.

Q.—Do you recollect when the prisoner was ill at your father's house in June a year ago? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—Did he send you for his pistol? A.—Yes, Sir; he sent me to the Hoffman House for it; I got it from the clerk and brought it to him.

Q.—Did you notice anything strange in his manner? A.—He was somewhat nervous.

Q.—What did he say as to his apprehensions at that time? Objected to. Question allowed. Exception. A.—He told me he couldn't pass a night without the pistol, and hadn't for some time.

Q.—What fear did he express? A.—He said he carried the pistol, being in fear of an attack.

Cross-examined by Mr. Beach—Q.—What was the nature of his complaint at that time? A.—I think it was a poison on the skin; when he sent me for the pistol, asked him why he carried it, and he said he always carried one since his troubles with Fisk; that he was afraid of an attack from Fisk or some of his men.

Mr. McKeon then read the testimony of Patrick Clarke, taken before the Coroner.

TESTIMONY OF DR. B. HOWE.

Dr. Benjamin Howe was called, and testified in answer to Mr. Tremaine:

Q.—What is your profession? A.—I am a medical practitioner: I reside in New-York, and have done so for fourteen or fifteen years; I am a member of the Royal Medical and Chirurgical Society of London; I was appointed such in 1865; it is the leading medical society of the United Kingdom; they publish regularly a pamphlet of their transactions.

Q.—Are you acquainted with Taylor on Poisons? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—Is that a high medical authority? A.—There is no higher on poisons, to my knowledge.

Q.—Do you know of George Harley's Old Vegetable Neurotics? A.—I have heard of it as an authority.

TESTIMONY OF MARSHALL COWING.

Marshall Cowing was then sworn, and testified in answer to Mr. Tremaine: Q.—What is your business? A.—I am manufacturer of metallic pumps and other hydraulic machines.

Q.—Where have you been living? A.—I have boarded at the Fifth-avenue Hotel, the Grand Central, and other places; I am now keeping house in Seventy-eighth-street; I boarded at the Grand Central from the time it opened, last August a year ago, with the exception of a few months, until quite recently.

Q.—Do you know Drs. Fisher and Tripler? A.—I do.

Q.—How long have you known Dr. Fisher? A.—Upward of a year.

Q.—Were you intimate with him? A.—We were quite intimate; we sat at the table a great deal together.

Q.—How long have you known Dr. Tripler? A.—Since last November or December; he boarded at the house; I am well acquainted with him.

Q.—Where were you at the time Fisk was shot? A.—I was then boarding at the hotel; I came in within an hour afterward.

Q.—Do you recollect the conversation with Tripler in regard to it? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—Did you have a conversation with him in regard to his probing? A.—Yes, Sir; I was reminding the doctors in a quiet way that Fisk might have been killed by practice; Dr. Fisher told me to tell Tripler that he needn't be so all alarmed, that he punched away at Fisk half an hour before he came; I told Tripler it was very unprofessional for Dr. Fisher to say anything of that sort; that it showed much, and it was too serious a thing to joke about; he said I did punch away at him for some time, as Dr. Fisher said, but my instrument was entirely unfit for the purpose, and I didn't go so far as perhaps I otherwise would, if I had been a regular physician; he said, further, that Fisher was unwise in saying such a thing as that, for Fisher probed Fisk, and if I were to tell what I know about him I could sink him—he could not answer his charges; I had a conversation with Fisher after he attended Fisk, and he said he struck the bullet at four inches and shoved it four and a half or five inches; I asked him why he had not extracted it, and he said his probes were not of the right sort; I asked him why he did not get the right probes, and he said he didn't have time—the case needed immediate attention; he told me this several times, and I think he told James Hand, coal merchant, the same thing.

Cross-examined by Mr. Beach.

Q.—Did you ever make any memorandum of any of these conversations you have spoken of? A.—No, Sir; I kept a business diary, but didn't put these things in; I didn't think they were of sufficient consequence, no more than that they were of a serious character.

Q.—I think you said they were loose in their character? A.—In starting the conversation with Dr. Fisher, I did; I asked him in order to find out what the real state of things was—that was the first conversation; the conversation afterwards was loose.

Q.—Do you recollect any other conversation you had with Dr. Fisher before you talked with Tripler? A.—I can't say yes or no to that, because I think I did, but I am not positive.

Q.—Can you do anything more than to give the substance of one of those conversations? A.—I can't give any particular one; the conversations were about the same each time.

Q.—One conversation, then, gives the substance of all? A.—Yes.

Q.—Give the substance of the interview with Tripler? A.—I told Mr. Tripler that Dr. Fisher requested me to say to him that he had punched away at Fisk for half an hour before he got there, before he saw him; Dr. Tripler replied that he didn't know why Fisher should make such a remark; it was entirely uncalled for; Mr. Fisher had probed him also, he said, and if I should tell what I knew about Fisher could wipe him out; he would not dare to show his head in this hotel; and why he should talk thus about me I don't see; now," says Dr. Tripler, "to show you what kind of a man he is, I come to the doctor his patient; he agrees to give me half what I collect; told me to make out my bill in this Fisk matter $250; make them out both alike, his and my own, and send them in; says he you make your's out and I'll send them each separately."

Q.—Did this occur at the first conversation? A.—No, Sir; but I said it in one conversation.

The witness again stated the substance of the conversation and continued: I asked him if it was customary for a doctor to do the probing alone, or with some other doctor present; he said, "I thought I would venture a little, but not go to any serious extent."

Q.—When he used that expression, did you understand it as humorous or jocose? A.—No, I thought it a pretty serious thing; I told the defense of it might before last.

MISCELLANEOUS TESTIMONY.

Dr. McCready was here called to the stand, and testified simply in relation to medical authorities, stating that "Horley's Vegetable Neurotics" and "Taylor on Poisons" were authorities.

Mr. McKeon then read the deposition of Amasa Sprague, President of the National Trotting Association, at Providence, R. I., to show that Stokes had a bona fide business engagement at Providence on the 9th of January, and that his last words to Mr. Sprague were, "I certainly shall be there." His business was the settling of a debt between him and Smith, of the firm of Smith, Gould & Martin. All the important portions were excluded.

The deposition of Dorman B. Eaton, taken by commission in London, was then read, but all portions of evidence of importance were excluded and exceptions taken, and only matters of personal history admitted.

John Crofton was next called. He is a surveyor and architect, and testified as to measurements of the staircase and hall-way. The distance of the sofa where the pistol was found from the parlor-door was thirteen feet nine inches. He experimented by trying to throw his tape-measure from the door and lodging it between the back and seat of the sofa, and found he could not do it.

AFTER THE RECESS.

Dr. Benjamin Howard was recalled. He stated: I am Professor of Surgery in the University of Vermont, and a member of the Royal Medical and Chirurgical Society of London: I am also a member of the New-York Medical Society; I have the Medical Register of the City of New-York; the name of F. W. Fisher is not in that list.

In cross-examination, Dr. Howard said the work was principally compiled by Dr. Purdy and Dr. Elliott; it is a record of all reputable graduates of reputable colleges, practicing in the City of New-York; the Medical Historical Society is established with the express purpose of examining into the records of medical practitioners.

Judge BEACH—Do you know how the manuscript was made up.

WITNESS—I know the men that did it.

Judge BEACH—That isn't personal knowledge.

Mr. TREMAINE—Is there any other published list of physicians known as the Medical Register of New-York? A.—There is not.

Mr. TREMAINE—That is our case, with the exception of evidence, he does not respond. [To the officers.] Call John Rothwell again.

No witness of that name responded.

The COURT—Do you close?

Mr. TREMAINE—We close there.

The COURT—Go on, Mr. District-Attorney.

The following witnesses were called in rebuttal:

CHARLES G. HALL RECALLED.

Mr. Charles G. Hill (who, it will be remembered, was the first witness called at the opening of the case) was examined as to whether he saw any pistol on the floor. He stated that he saw none on the floor of of either room or in the passage.

Mr. TREMAINE—Is that rebuttal?

DISTRICT-ATTORNEY—Why, the prisoner stated that he dropped his pistol opposite this room door, No. 219.

Q.—Did you see any pistol there that day at all? A.—I did not see any pistol there that day.

Q.—How near were you to the prisoner?

Mr. TREMAINE—I object to this going over the evidence again, under pretence of rebutting.

The COURT—We won't let them go all over it again, but I think they may show how near he was to the prisoner.

DISTRICT-ATTORNEY—I don't want to go over it all again; but they have introduced the prisoner's evidence, and that changes the whole circumstances.

The witness then pointed out upon the diagram the relative positions of himself and prisoner.

Q.—Was it light enough for you to see distinctly? A.—It was.

Q.—Could you have seen a pistol if there had been one on the floor? A.—I will say that I think I could.

TESTIMONY OF FISK'S INTERPRETER.

George Bardin was next called.

Mr. MCKEON—Vous etes un Francais?

WITNESS—Non, Monsieur. [Laughter.]

Mr. MCKEON—What are you then?

WITNESS—A Belgian.

DISTRICT-ATTORNEY—You were in the employ of Col. Fisk? A.—Yes, Sir—as interpreter; I lived in the same house with him—not always; I was there mostly mornings and evenings; I was there in the morning when he was dressing; I recollect the day of the morning on which he was wounded; I was present when he dressed on that morning.

Q.—Now, will you state to the Court and jury whether he had any pistol?

Mr. TREMAINE—I object.

The COURT—Why?

Mr. TREMAINE—On the ground that while under the charge of alleged homicide, whether affirmatively (that it was done maliciously) or negatively (that it was a case of justifiable homicide, it was just as much a part of their duty to show all they could bearing upon the killing. They have already given some evidence in relation to the pistol; they proved something in regard to it by the valet; they produced the clothes, and they certainly examined the coachman. Now, I don't suppose that because the defense shows different from the case on the part of the people that they are to reopen the case. It was their duty at the outset to show that the killing was malicious, and, therefore, they were to give evidence that should exclude every other mode of killing. When evidence is offered as to where Fisk dressed in the morning, it is too remote.

The Court admitted the evidence. Exception.

Q.—Were you present at the time he dressed in the morning? A.—Yes.

Q.—He had no pistol in his possession? A.—No pistol.

Q.—How do you know that? A.—Well, the colored boy was called out, and he asked me to hand him his vest and pantaloons; I held the legs of the pantaloons so—when he put them on; I helped him to put his coat on; the same thing was done at three o'clock—I helped him to put his coat on, and brushed him.

Q.—When was that? A.—Between three twenty and three thirty; he had no pistol then; he had not made any change in his dress; he merely took off his coat and washed his hands; I saw him get into his carriage; that was the last I saw of him.

Mr. Bardin was then examined by Mr. McKeon. He was Fisk's companion after being his interpreter for the opera bouffe company. He testified to having to dress Fisk every day and accompanying him everywhere.

Q.—Did you breakfast with him? A.—A good many times; sometimes twice a week, sometimes more.

Q.—Were you with him all that morning? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—What time did he reach the office? A.—A quarter past eleven; at twelve o'clock a gentleman came in to give him a report of what had happened at the Yorkville Police Court; I remained with him from that time to three o'clock.

Q.—How many pairs of pantaloons had Mr. Fisk? A.—I never counted them, Sir; it was not my business.

Q.—How many coats had he? A.—I don't know.

Q.—What time did he dress in the afternoon? A.—He left the office about three, and went to his room; I don't know what he did; from three to twenty minutes past three he sent for me to give him $20; I obtained it of Mr. Comer and gave it to him.

Q.—Did you know that he had fifteen $100 bills at that time? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Who is Comer? A.—A farmer. [Laughter.]

Q.—He farms where? A.—At Goshen.

Q.—Did you know him in any other capacity? A.—In the office as Private Secretary to Mr. Fisk.

Q.—Was he a farmer when he was Private Secretary? A.—Yes, Sir; he and his son; he dealt in milk, I believe.

Q.—Did you see his farm? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—Was it a milk-farm? A.—I don't know the difference between a milk-farm and any other farm. [Laughter.]

Judge Ingraham suggested that if anybody wished to laugh they should laugh to themselves, or he must take measures to stop the laughter.

Q.—You spoke of living in Twenty-fourth-street? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—Did Montaland live in that house with you? A.—No, Sir; I never lived with Montaland in my life.

Q.—Did you see Fisk put his cloak on that day? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Do you know whether there were pockets in that cape or not? A.—I could not say.

John Marshall, Mr. Fisk's valet, who was recalled, testified that on that morning he assisted in dressing Mr. Fisk.

Q.—State whether at that time he had any pistol upon his person? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Could he have one in his clothes without you knowing it? Excluded.

Q.—Was there any pistol there? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Did you ever see him have a pistol in his possession? A.—A pair of pistols was presented to him by Mr. Cooney last January; I put them in a drawer for him, and took them down to Long Branch in July; there he gave them to Mr. Sisson.

Q.—Did you ever know him to carry a pistol? A.—No, Sir.

FRANCIS HOUSEMAN RECALLED.

Francis Houseman, recalled for the prosecution in rebutial: I was the driver of Col. Fisk's carriage on the day he was shot; do not remember of ever seeing a pistol in the hands of Fisk.

Cross-examined by Mr. McKeon:

Q.—Did you put the trappings on the Colonel's horse when he turned out on parade? A.—I put the saddle on.

Q.—Did he carry pistols in the holsters? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Did you dress him on the 12th of July last for the parade? A.—I don't know anything about it.

Q.—So, no, the horse; did you dress the horse on the day of the riot? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Was the horse out? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—He didn't mount then? A.—No, Sir. [Laughter.]

Mr. Francis Curtis was recalled by the prosecution, and examined at considerable length as to whether he saw a pistol on the stairway of the hotel when he went to Col. Fisk's assistance; when a piece of his clothing; or whether he thought of looking for a pistol when he saw the Colonel lying prostrate at the foot of the stairs immediately after the shooting, but to which no answer was given at that time.

Dr. Tripler was recalled for the prosecution, and after a great deal of discussion on the part of counsel, was briefly questioned as to the probe used on Col. Fisk, and as to his conversation with other doctors after the Colonel's demise, in reference to the administration of the number of minims of Magendie's solution.

Q.—Upon the 6th of January, at the time of the homicide, did you see anywhere about the clothes or person of Mr. Fisk, or on the stairway, any pistol? A.—I did not. Sir.

Q.—Did you remove any portion of his clothing? A.—I did; his pants, drawers, vest, socks, and assisted in removing his collar and scarf; I have no recollection of his cloak or overcoat at all.

Cross-examined by Mr. Tremaine:

Q.—Do you know Dr. Shine of this City? A.—Yes, Sir; saw him a few days after the shooting, and had a conversation with him below the Grand Central Hotel.

Q.—Did you tell him at that time that the probe had broken in the wound? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Sure of that? A.—I am.

Q.—Did you tell him nothing about the quantity of minims of Magendie's solution you gave Col. Fisk? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Didn't you tell him you had given him 120 minims hypodermically and that Dr. Fisher had given a large amount by mouth, and that you and he got scared and had to stop? A.—I do not recollect it.

Q.—Did you say anything in substance like that to him? A.—Nothing like it, sir.

Another long discussion then ensued as to allowing the witness to testify in relation to the probe used.

Q.—Is this probe (produced) in the same condition as it was when you used it? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—It has been broken? A.—Yes, Sir, since that time; it was used at the Coroner's inquest; I broke the top of it two years ago.

Q.—Was it broken during any operation? A.—It was broken in Vandam-street, in an operation I made myself; that is the only probe I ever owned; I have used that since 1869.

Q.—Has that probe been broken in any other place except at the top two years ago? A.—No, Sir; at Mr. Fisk's post-mortem examination, in trying to screw it up tight to give to a doctor, I wore off the last thread of the screw in the centre here where it joints together, and it got so it would not hold any more and it became useless.

Q.—It became useless how soon after it was used on Mr. Fisk? A.—Within two days.

Q.—Had you performed any other operation with it after you had probed this wound until it became useless? A.—I had not.

Q.—How many wounds had you probed with it before you probed Col. Fisk's? A.—I cannot answer that question.

Q.—Had you ever probed a gun-shot wound with it? A.—Yes, Sir, in the thigh.

Q.—Was that the only one you ever probed? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—How long was it before you probed this? A.—Just before Christmas.

By Mr. BEACH—Q.—Are you able to say positively whether or not you made any such statements to Dr. Shine as to administering 120 minims of Magendie's solution, or that Dr. Fisher administered 120 by the mouth? A.—I never made any such statement.

Adjourned to 10½ o'clock this morning.

The Treaty Saved—The News in Parliament—Public Sentiment on the Geneva Decision—The Case of Judge Keogh—The Nine Hours' Strike.

From Our Own Correspondent.

LONDON, Saturday, June 29, 1872.

Mr. Gladstone and Lord Granville reserved to themselves the pleasure of being the first to publish the good news from Geneva. The House of Commons meets an hour earlier than the House of Lords, and so Mr. Gladstone had the start of Lord Granville, whose audience, however, was not diminished thereby. Mr. Gladstone's statement only settled the appetite for Lord Granville's, and as many people as could get in hurried to the Upper House. A pleasant story will bear repetition, and there was a satisfaction in hearing the First Minister fully confirmed by the Foreign Secretary. Unfortunately, Gladstone has got the reputation of being so "dodgy" in his statements that there are a good many members of the House of Commons who never quite believe anything he says, and it was a relief to them to know that Lord Granville said the same thing. The Ministerial announcement was published at once in the evening papers and telegraphed through the country, and it appears to have produced a good impression. Its effect on 'Change has not been very marked, but itis settling-time there, and investors are anxious to keep their hands free till they see what the new French loan is like. There was a rise in Consols, American securities are stronger, and trade has generally been braced. Most people are very well pleased that the arbitration is to go on, but not everybody. The great body of common sense, moderate, practical people, who like a quiet life, and who are always sorry that trouble and anxiety should be thrown away on anything abortive, are very well satisfied. They think it a good thing that a troublesome and irritating question shou'd be put in a fair way of settlement, and all's well that ends well. But then there are the prophets who prophesied evil, and whose predictions have been falsified; there are the "bears," whose calculations have been upset, and the Tories, whose nice little political game has been completely spoiled; and none of these are delighted with what has happened. Disraeli, who never showed his astuteness to greater advantage than in his guarded reticence about the treaty, allowed the Premier's statement to pass without remark; but a young whipper-snapper on his side gave vent to the chagrin which he was not alone in feeling; and in the other House, Lord Cairns could not help pointing out bitterly that the Government had had a providential escape from a disaster of their own brewing. The truth is, the Tories had counted on the failure of the treaty as sure to be one of their great cards at the elections, and they are naturally disgusted that the trick goes to the Government and not to them. But the prophets are more put out than anybody else, and their desperation is very droll. They have been so positive and persistent in their predictions of mischief, they have shaken their heads over the treaty so often, and pronounced its case quite hopeless, that they resent very much its being still so manifestly and boisterously alive. The Pall Mall, for example, has been confident for months that the treaty must die, and only two days ago it was sure it was dead, and warned its readers against the delusive telegrams from New-York and Geneva, which were all fudge, it said, go up for stock-jobbing purposes. The official news might have been expected to put it a little out of countenance. Not at all. Yesterday the Pall Mall proved convincingly that the Geneva agreement was no settlement at all, that nobody could tell what the arbitrators meant, and that they didn't know themselves, and that the only person who knew what he was about was President Grant, who still had the indirect claims and the supplementary treaty in reserve, and meant to play off the Senate against the tribunal. All that the President says is that he will not press these claims before a Court which has warned him that it is prejudiced against them; and it is argued that the unofficial declaration of the tribunal is no more binding on America than it would have been on England had it taken an opposite shape. It may be, as the Pall Mall says, a foolish confidence, but it is certainly assumed by our people over here that the indirect claims have been ruled out of the reckoning.

POOR JUDGE KEOGH.

Poor Judge Keogh is still being terribly baited. He thought it as well to quit Ireland and take a short holiday among the Saxons, but there is no truth in the report of his resignation, and he means next week to go circuit as usual. His family and friends are very much alarmed for his safety, and it certainly will be a trying time for him. In escaping for a breathing place to England, he has not escaped from the malice and menaces of his enemies. Almost every post has brought a letter of scurrilous abuse and blood-thirsty denunciation. His life has been repeatedly threatened, and Judge Lawson, who goes circuit with him, has been warned not to ride in the same carriage with Keogh when traveling by railway or otherwise, lest he might get the bullet intended for his companion. The most horrible letters have also been sent to Mr. Keogh. Hard words, says the proverb, break no bones; but in Ireland hard words and bone-breaking are apt to mean very much the same thing. As Judge Keogh himself observed in the judgment on the Galway priests which has stirred up this ferment, it is all very well to pretend that an allusion to a man's death-knell is only a political metaphor, but a Tipperary man, with a blunderbuss, would be apt to understand it in a more obvious and literal sense. A Roman Catholic priest at Belfast, at a public meeting, the other day, called Keogh the greatest wretch that ever trod the land, a wretch who was equally ready to sell his country and his God; and he had had an opportunity last week, and he hoped soon to have another, of trampling on the ashes of the burned Judge—meaning Keogh's effigy. This is another of the figures of speech which are apt to be misunderstood by excited Irishmen. Father Conway, one of the priests found guilty of intimidation at Galway, has just died, and his death has furnished another pretext for attacks on the Judge. "Father Conway—Judge Keogh's first victim"—said one writer, "has gone to his account. He was consigned to a bed of fever, in his delirium repeating the sentences of contumely that had broken his noble heart, and sent him today a murdered priest to his grave." [Sensation.] There can be no doubt, I think, that Keogh erred in introducing such heated and personal language into a political address; but it is clear that the dignity of justice cannot be maintained in a country where one of its chief officers can be treated in this way with impunity. There have been some warm words on the subject between Sir Robert Peel and Mr. Gladstone. Peel asked what the Government meant to do for Keogh's protection, intimating that if he did not receive a satisfactory answer he would at once bring the matter before the House. Gladstone replied that he was not accustomed to be addressed in such a tone, and protested against it. But he said the Government admitted the duty of protecting the Judges, and would do all they could to keep Keogh from harm. The Government are certainly in a very awkward position. They cannot institute a State prosecution against all the little boys or ragamuffins who burn the Judge in effigy, and yet if they do not openly take the Judge's part, they will be suspected of favoritism toward the priests. In fact, if the suspicion did not already exist, they would probably be trusted to do what was right without any prompting or threatening. One of Gladstone's sons is said to have this week been formally received by Archbishop Manning into the Roman Catholic Church. The whole question of Judge Keogh's decision and the treatment to which he has been subjected will be raised on Monday next, when a motion by Mr. Butt, the Home Ruler, will be considered in the House of Commons, for removing the Judge from the Bench in consequence of his having "abused his position as a Judge of election petitions by delivering a violent personal and partisan address, inconsistent with his duty as a Judge, and thereby caused great scandal in Ireland, shaken the confidence of the people in the administration of justice in Her Majesty's Courts, and brought those Courts into contempt." There is no chance of this motion being carried in the House of Commons, but it will have its effect in Ireland.

THE NINE HOURS' STRIKE.

The strike for a nine hours' day in the building trades of London still continues. The masters have retaliated with a lock-out, and each side seems to be resolute and defiant. Fresh attempts have been made to get the matter referred to arbitration, but the men, confident in their own strength, prefer to fight it out. The Trades Council of Working Men, belonging to different trades, has recommended the operative builders to agree to arbitration on wages if the masters will concede the nine hours. But the masters insist that the whole question of hours, as well as wages, should go before the arbiters; and even if the nine hours were conceded, the men would not allow it to be supposed that they were willing to pay for the loss of time thereby involved out of their wages. The strikes in the coal and iron trades have already sent up the price of spades, locks, files, nails, and all hardware goods. There has been a rise of at least fifty per cent, in nine months, and prices are still mounting. The engineers' strike at Newcastle last year will also make machinery very dear; and a rise in rents through building strikes would raise prices all round. Nothing could be more flourishing than English trade at present, but if there came a pinch in the Winter it would be very severely felt. While the carpenters and masons, poor fellows, find ten hours a day of healthy open-air work too much for their delicate constitutions, the dress-makers of the West End are mildly suggesting that fourteen hours at a stretch of constant stitching, in narrow, confined, ill-ventilated rooms, is rather more than they can bear. A deputation has been to the Home Secretary to urge that the hours of women and girls employed as milliners and dress-makers should not exceed ten and a half a day, even in the height of the "season." At present women in factories are allowed by law to work only twelve hours a day, with an hour and a half for meals, the working time being from 6 A. M. to 6 P. M.; but the dress-makers work fourteen hours, between 8 A. M. and 10 P. M., to the "great detriment of their moral, mental and physical condition." The Home Secretary could only say that Parliament evidently intended that certain "season" trades, that is, trades whose work was at its greatest pressure during a month or two of the year, should not be too rigidly tied down as to hours at the time, and that he could not legislate on his own account.

F. H. G.

AN ENGLISH SWINDLER.

A Successful Career in France—Its Sudden Termination.

The Paris corespondent of the London Echo gives the following account of a singular case now being tried by the Correctional Court of Paris: "You may remember, he says, that one of the witnesses examined in the trial of Prince Pierre Bonaparte, for shooting Victor Noir, was an Englishman named Natal, whose evidence gave rise to a good deal of discussion. Since then nothing more was heard of him till a few days ago, when he was arrested at Auteuil on the charge of having, by means of false pretenses, extracted various sums of money, amounting in all to 120,000 francs, from an English city merchant, whose name is given as Mr. Macteggart Grant. The prisoner appears to have been living at Auteuil like a Prince. His house is most magnificently furnished, his library rich and extensive, and his plate irreproachable. He keeps seven servants, two carriages and three horses, and altogether was looked on by his neighbors as a representative swell of the period.

The story of his adventures in London reads more like a romance than a reality. A few days before the beginning of the siege he left the French capital, and, on his arrival in the English metropolis, made the acquaintance of the Mr. Mactaggart Grant in question, to whom he first of all represented himself as a French refugee, and asked the loan of £18 to pay his hotel expenses. Mr. Grant advanced the money, and thought no more about it. However, Natal called on him again a short time after, and this time professed to disclose his real name and position. He said he was the Count de Natal, Duc de Balan, brother-in-law of the Duchesse de Luynes and the Duc de la Rochefoucauld, and various other things. He represented himself as possessing no end of property in France, thousands at his bankers, and a rente of £1,500 on the books of the Bank of France. He pretended to be well known to M. Rouher, M. de Persigny, M. Chevreau, Sir Richard Wallace, and others, and offered to present Mr. Grant to the Empress Eugenie whenever he liked. Unfortunately, the blockade of Paris deprived him of his usual resources, and he once more threw himself on the bounty of Mr. Grant, who advanced him another loan. In his next interview with his generous benefactor, he talked about being engaged to contract for the revictualing of Paris and for a French Government loan, and asked Mr. Grant to recommend him a banker, and the firm of Matheson & Co. was chosen. According to the evidence it appears that Mr. Grant believed all this, and, moreover, that he was to share in the profits. The commission was to be divided between them, and Natal succeeded in inducing Mr. Grant to advance him another sum of money. On Feb. 19, 1871, encouraged by his success, he wrote to the city merchant that M. Thiers was about to form a Provisionary Government, half-Orleanist, half-Independent, and that M. Rouher, who was charged to select the Independent Ministers, had offered him Natal, the portfolio of Minister of Finance, which he had decided to accept, "even at the risk of losing his reputation." A few days after he telegraphed to Mr. Grant that M. Pouyer-Quertier was about to arrive in London to confer with Mr. Grant about the loan, but he subsequently telegraphed that M. Pouyer-Quertier was prevented for the moment, and the next day he wailed on Mr. Grant himself, and showed him the following dispatch, which he said he had just received: 'Natal.—Pray leave at once for Versailles; the general terms are adopted; slight modification; differences with our friends still exist.—Rouher, 16, Avenue d'Eylau.' He gets another loan, and leaves for Paris. On his arrival he writes to Mr. Grant that certain rival bankers wanted to bribe him, that he had been offered 10,000,000 of francs, but that he scorned to do a base action. He again writes, but this time he is sorry to inform Mr. Grant, that M. Thiers has played another of his tricks—he has arranged the loan with Rothschild & Co.' However, Natal soon gets up another decoy. He tells Mr. Grant that he is negotiating with Count Bismarck and Favre, Chief of Peace, and winds up with the polite request, 'Can you lend me £3,000?' And Mr. Grant was too polite not to oblige him. Shortly after this he informs Mr. Grant that he is about to fight a duel with a great personage, and that as he may be killed, he has made him his testamentary executor. On another occasion he proposes to place Mr. Grant at the head of a great philanthropic institution he has established. His last news to Mr. Grant is that M. Thiers wants to make him Ambassador either in Berlin or London.

When placed in the dock he was most carefully dressed in black, and bore himself throughout with the utmost coolness. He is a middle-aged man, with dark hair and long beard. He gave his name as Victor Natal, and said he was born in London. He is married to an Italian, and has several children. He came to Paris in 1868. He denied the charge of swindling, though he regretted the letters he had written, and contended that all Mr. Grant had done for him was out of pure friendship. Mr. Mactaggart Grant, who cannot speak a word of French, was in Court, accompanied by an interpreter. It appears that, his suspicions having been aroused at last, he inquired at Chiselhurst and Versailles, and found that Natal was as great a stranger to Napoleon III. as to M. Thiers. He then determined to bring the present charge. Maître Lachaud, who defended the prisoner, read several letters from Mr. Grant to Natal, in which the merchant declared that he had given Natal the money to do what he liked with it; that he had done so out of friendship, and that he had not been led away by the titles he had adopted. What Mr. Grant appeared to complain of was, not that he had been swindled, but that 'his friend Natal' would not confess his faults. Maître Lachaud contended that to provoke the sympathy of a man was not a crime. He, moreover, insisted that, as the charge of swindling brought against his client was committed in England, and that as Natal, although living in France, was an English subject, a French Court was not competent to judge the matter, and that it must be tried in England. The Court took time to consider its judgment, which had not been delivered up to the moment of writing."

A Queen of the Dance.

From the London Echo.

"I never refused jewels," said Mme. Taglioni yesterday; "they were never offered me by private individuals, but I have received costly presents from royal personages." And well did this unconscious eulogium become the Ex-Queen of the dance—the incomparable artist who earned a world-wide reputation for grace, flexibility and modesty. By this last and best ornament of womanhood she succeeded in elevating the dance to a position among the arts it had never previously attained, and to the laying aside of the "Taglioni style" must be attributed the decline of the modern ballet. For, in the main, people admire the beautiful, and soon discover that true beauty cannot exist without refinement and delicacy. It is not, perhaps, too much to hope that the return of Mme. Taglioni to London, when, so far as the stage is concerned, her dancing days are over, will promote a return to style of dancing which pleases without demoralizing, and brings a smile instead of a blush to the face of beauty. In the five and twenty years which have passed since her retirement, stage dancing has fallen greatly. The competition is now one of indelicate display rather than of artistic grace. It is a reproach to our time to turn back the pages of Punch, and to refer to the years when that genial master of the ceremonies wrote of Mme. Taglioni's then active and glorious career upon the stage; and no less is the decorous costume in which Mr. Punch represents her, a reproof to the artists of today, who seem not more inferior to her in powers of performance than they are in personal conduct.

"Yours must be a curious history," I said; "you have known so many remarkable persons." "So Count d'Orsay used to say," she replied; "he said he would give 100,000 francs to be allowed to publish my papers; but I never desired that kind of notoriety. I loved dancing for its own sake, and began to learn at nine years old, my master an Italian dancer, named my teacher. I practiced six hours a day, till I was fifteen, when I made my début in Vienna in a piece intitled 'La Réception d'une Nymphe au Temple de Terpsichore.' At first it was rapturously applauded, and at my third performance it was called forty-two times before the curtain, till becoming exhausted. I was carried off the stage. I was extremely active and slender in those days, and people used to say I lived in the air, and never touched the earth. I did touch it, however, mais bien, rarement, pendant," she added, laughing. "I scarcely thought of the audience. I knew my father was a relation to me. I both loved and feared him, and danced for him alone. He was a severe teacher, but when my success was assured, he said, 'Had I told you at first you had talent, your progress would have been stopped. Self-conceit would have prevented effort, therefore I blamed rather than flattered.'"

This strict but judicious master died last year at the advanced age of ninety-four. His daughter has always enjoyed excellent health, and as she says, "I would never know I was not young if I had not so much to remember." She insisted that study is always required, no matter how well we may dance, for we never know when it will enough. Though I was considered the best dancer in the world, I continued to learn and practice two hours a day while I remained on the stage, and I always performed in the morning the dances intended for the evening. I constantly invented new steps and movements, and seemed to learn something every day; but when I left the stage I thought I had still much to learn." Like all those who have attained excellence in any art, she seems to believe less in genius than in diligent and unremitting labor, and her conversation is characterized by a singular modesty whenever remembers how, in her youth, she was fêted and caressed. She alluded gravely, but not sadly, to her loss of fortune during the late war, but is hopeful for the future; for, after her long retirement, she is able to teach dancing as well as in her youth, though her flying days are over. "But flying?" as she observed, "is only wanted for the procession, and I no longer teach for the stage, but only for the drawing-room." Mme. Taglioni is the widow of a French nobleman, the Comte Gilbert de Voisins, but she is best known by her maiden name of Marie Taglioni. She is very active, bright and charming in manner, is extremely spirituelle, and speaks several languages. In fact, she shows how attractive a lady of middle age can be when she unites the ease and dignity of years with habitual grace and affability. Mme. Taglioni is now established in London, and occupies herself in giving to young ladies lessons in dancing and deportment.

FASHIONS FOR JULY.

July, says Le Follet, with its bright sunny days, is the time, par excellence, for garden parties, fêtes, concerts, although by the end of the month preparations for traveling will be the order of the day. The immense variety both of material and of trimming is almost perplexing—the task of selection a somewhat difficult one for the modiste; but certainly nothing can be more charming than the light elegant costumes now seen.

Although the "Pompadour" patterns on a black ground are still worn,

WEDNESDAY, July 10—P. M.

The day was a dull one on the Stock Exchange. The chief interest was in Erie Stock, which fluctuated 2 ₱ cent., both here and in London. The early quotation was 45 ₱ cent. in London and 56 ₱ cent. at our Exchange. Later in the day, London fell to 44, and then to 43½@43¾ ₱ cent., which influenced sales here at 54⅞@54 ₱ cent. The prices for other Stocks were much the same as last night on a very moderate business. The Railroad Mortgages were generally better than yesterday, and a good many small investment orders appeared at the Exchange Board. In the Public Funds there was scarcely any business at the Exchange, and the office transactions among the prominent dealers were not large. Prices are well maintained, and the 5 ₱ cents are especially firm, both in London and in our own market.

The sales of Gold, as on yesterday, were chiefly at 113¾ ₱ cent. The Export demand fell below the expected shipment today, and a leading drawer of Exchange was offering 60 days' London at 109¼ ₱ cent. less a brokerage. These facts should have weakened Gold in the Afternoon, but as one or two bright speculators were said to be talking up the price on Greeley's nomination at Baltimore, the quotation advanced to 113⅛@114 ₱ cent. The time for the active Presidential canvass would seem to be too far off, as the weather certainly is too hot, to discuss the possible political influences of the Fall campaign either on the Stock or the Gold market. In the meantime we apprehend that few fortunes will be made in the Gold Room on the chances of the present Administration being superseded by the Democratic nominee at Baltimore.

The rates for Money among the Brokers today were 4@5 ₱ cent., and some of the Railroad Stocks and Gold were lent out on 3@4 ₱ cent Interest on the Money advanced upon them. Since the Erie election, yesterday, the Stock of that Road is not so difficult to borrow.

The Treasury was able to buy only $511,250 United States 5-20s for the Sinking Fund today within the price of Gold. The whole offering was only $711, 850, or $288,150 short of the $1,000,000 advertised for.

After the late Board the Stock market in the Hall of the Exchange continued dull, and prices in the main were steady, closing as follows, compared with the last figures of Tuesday afternoon:

BANKING AND FINANCIAL.

☞ A SAFE INVESTMENT
FOR TRUST FUNDS.
THE MIDLAND PACIFIC RAILWAY
FIRST MORTGAGE SEVEN PER CENT.
GOLD BONDS.

This road is entirely completed and in full operation between the Missouri River and Lincoln, the capital of the State of Nebraska, and is earning more than all its expenses including interest on its bonds, while its traffic is constantly and rapidly increasing. The line has been built wholly by stock subscriptions, and among its stockholders are some of the most successful railway supporters and financiers in the country. The cost of the road, with its Franchises, Real Estate, Equipments, Telegraph Lines, &c., has been $43 333 per mile, while the mortgage on it is but $18,333, making the Company's securities safe beyond contingency.

The Midland Pacific will connect with the Union Pacific on the west, and on the east with direct lines to the Atlantic Coast and all intermediate centres. Its location is therefore a most important and commanding one, it being the central link of a new trunk route, shortening the distance to the Pacific by 147 miles. As a local enterprise, the Midland Pacific is invaluable. It traverses a fertile tract of country, one of the finest agricultural regions in the Union, and is the main feeder of a rapidly-increasing population. We have examined personally this entire enterprise, and recognize its importance and value, and confidently recommend its Bonds to investors.

During the past few years we have negotiated a large number of railway loans, and there is not one of these roads whose property does not exceed in value, by 100 per cent. the amount of its first mortgage bonds. Present price of Midland Pacifics, 90 and accrued interest. Bonds may be registered without charge, and all marketable securities taken in exchange at full rates.

TURNER BROTHERS,
Bankers, No. 14 Nassau-st.

☞ BANKING-HOUSE OF JAY COOKE & CO.
No. 20 WALL-ST., NEW-YORK.

We continue to sell at par, adding accrued interest, the First Mortgage Gold Bonds of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company. On the completion of this season's contracts, there will be FIVE HUNDRED AND SEVENTEEN miles of the main line of the Road in operation, uniting Lake Superior with the Missouri River, and securing the large traffic of the North-west. This amount of Road also entitles the Company to Ten Million Four Hundred Thousand Acres of Land, located in Central Minnesota, Eastern Dakota, and in the Columbia Valley on the Pacific Coast. The Bonds are secured by a first mortgage on the Road, its Traffic and Franchise, and on the entire Land Grant received from the Government. The rate of interest is Seven and Three-Tenths, Gold, equivalent to about Eight and a Quarter per cent. in Currency. Believing the security to be ample, and the rate of interest satisfactory, we recommend these bonds as a desirable investment. Holders of the United States 5-20s and high-priced corporate securities may materially increase both their principal and their interest income by exchanging for Northern Pacifics.

JAY COOKE & CO.,
New-York, Philadelphia and Washington.

☞ ST. JOSEPH AND DENVER CITY RAILROAD COMPANY'S FIRST MORTGAGE BONDS
Are being absorbed by an increasing demand for them.

Besides being the obligation of a wealthy corporation, composed of men of experience and high-toned commercial integrity, they are secured by a first mortgage on the road, revenues, land grant, franchise and equipments, combined in one mortgage, and are readily negotiable both in the markets of this country and Europe.

A liberal sinking fund provided in the mortgage deed must advance the price upon the closing of the loan. Principal and interest payable in GOLD. Interest at eight (8 p. c.) per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually, free of tax. Principal in thirty years. Denominations, $1,000, $500 and $100, Coupons or Registered.

Price 97½ and accrued interest in currency, from Feb. 15, 1872.

Maps, circulars, documents and information furnished.

Trustees—Farmers' Loan and Trust Company of New York.

The diminished quantity of these Bonds for sale, and the increased demand absorbing them, warrant the belief that they will soon be sought for at an advance considerably above the present subscription price at which they can now be had through the principal banks and bankers throughout the country, and from the undersigned, who unhesitatingly recommend them.

TANNER & CO.,
Bankers, No. 11 Wall-st.

☞ BURLINGTON, CEDAR RAPIDS AND MINNESOTA RAILROAD FIRST MORTGAGE 7 PER CENT. GOLD CONVERTIBLE BONDS. (MILWAUKEE EXTENSION.)

We recommend these Bonds as a safe and desirable investment. Price for the present 92¾, and interest in currency. HENRY CLEWS & CO., 32 Wall-st.

According to the Tammany papers every State that sustains the Republican cause from this time to November, will be bought. This handy falsehood has already made its appearance with reference to North Carolina in the Tribune and the World, and will be repeated for each State as the successive elections approach. It will, however, deceive no one. The only persons likely to betray much feeling about it will be the "Liberal Republicans," and Democrats, on whom is cast the imputation of venality. If the majority of the people are for the Democrats, and all who are for Democracy are honest, why is there such feverish apprehension of their being bought up like so many cattle? Have the Tammany organs learned what an ill name awaits the bird that fouls its own nest?

On Saturday the Cincinnati Commercial made this statement concerning the Baltimore Convention:

"It will have done its work when it recommends the principles of the Cincinnati Convention, and the men who have been named as their exponents, and adjourns without making nominations. To go further will be interpreted as an attempt to Democratize the Liberal Republican movement, and drive from the support of the ticket a multitude of voters who will vote for Greeley and Brown only upon the assurance that they represent the best phase of progressive Republicanism, and not the doubtful advancement of a conservatism that moves only under the prick and goad of accomplished facts and hard political necessities."

The Convention went further, and has unquestionably driven from the support of the ticket many of the sincere men above referred to. Will the Commercial follow, or will it stand by the nomination to which "Tammany responds?"

When SEYMOUR was nominated in Tammany Hall four years ago, the room rang with a genuine rebel "yell." Before Mr. GREELEY was nominated in Baltimore yesterday, the bands played "My Maryland," "Dixie," and the "Bonnie Blue Flag." These tunes now are played as part of the "Reform" campaign. The mask would soon be thrown off if the people were mad enough to put the Democratic candidate at their head.

"Tammany responds to the Baltimore nomination," was the announcement obligingly placarded by the Ring in the City Hall Park yesterday afternoon. No one doubts it, and the people will have a rejoinder to make to Tammany's response in November next which the Ring will not care to publish in the Park, and over which they will not fire a single salute.

Will the World inform the public whether the Democracy now has "a hook in the nose" of Mr. GREELEY?

The Democracy and Its Candidate.

Under the operation of what Senator BAYARD called the "gag rule," Mr. GREELEY was yesterday made the Democratic candidate for the Presidency. Since the issues of the campaign are thus presented more clearly to the country, the result is not to be regretted. A Democratic candidate, presented by a Democratic Convention, and relying on Democrats for nine-tenths of the votes he expects to get, is something Republicans at least can understand. No one can now vote for Mr. GREELEY under the delusion that Republican principles are in this way to be advanced. So far as Mr. GREELEY professes principles in common with Republicans, they are much more distinctly and thoroughly represented by the proper Republican candidate. So far as he undertakes to make any issue with the Republican Party, he is essentially a Democrat. He cannot expect the support of any considerable number of his fellow-citizens who do not approve the purposes and sympathize with the spirit of the Democratic Party.

Those who view the Democracy with deep and well-founded distrust cannot confide in a Democratic candidate, however lately he may have doffed the uniform of Republicanism. There is not a single Democratic tendency of all those that have alarmed the country for twelve years past, to which Mr. GREELEY, in his present attitude, opposes the slightest resistance. There is not a single element of Democracy, of all those that have controlled its course since 1860, to the intense disgust of the patriotic and honest portion of our people, against which Mr. GREELEY, in his present position, dares to offer the faintest objection. He stands before the country, his lips sealed to any utterance of warning concerning the grave and numerous evils, he has justly taught the country for years past to expect from the supremacy of the Democratic Party. To the most obvious and important facts in our public affairs—facts he has himself constantly pointed out as those which ought to make every sincere lover of his country a supporter of the Republican Party—he is suddenly blind. He cannot see the renewal of violent persecution hanging over the heads of the newly-made citizens of the South; he cannot see the revival of dissension and disorder threatened by powerful portions of Southern society; he cannot see the wide-spread corruption, the greed of office, the low aims and degrading passions uniting the Democracy in this last desperate rally to regain a supremacy of which they have so long been deprived by the calm and resolute judgment of the best and largest portion of the American people. But Mr. GREELEY cannot expect the people themselves to be blinded by the causes that have combined to place the scales upon his own eyes. He has been an influential teacher of political truth in the past, but it was the truth, not the teacher, the people followed; and they will adhere to the cause he has betrayed, not to the man who has betrayed it.

Nor can Mr. GREELEY obtain the support of all the party whose candidate he now is. Not all who believe in Democracy believe in him. The better class of Democrats—and we appeal to the personal knowledge of every reader who is acquainted with any members of this class for the correctness of our assertion—repudiate him. They desire the supremacy of Democratic ideas, through error, as we conceive, but sincerely; and they are not ready to trust those ideas to a man whom they regard with suspicion and contempt. They see in him, not the representative of genuine Democracy, but the tool of the men who have brought Democracy to disgrace. They have heretofore had candidates who justified their confidence by sincerity of conviction, honesty of purpose, and consistency of personal character. They are not prepared to give their votes to a candidate who possesses none of these attributes, and whose glaring infidelity to his own party forbids them to expect any loyalty to their own. To decent Democrats, Mr. GREELEY'S nomination is much more than a ludicrous travesty on legitimate party action. It is a humiliating betrayal of their party into the hands of its most disreputable and most dangerous men.

And certainly if Mr. GREELEY has no claims on genuine Republicans or genuine Democrats, he has none on independent voters, who, with slight respect for any party ties, are accustomed to give their support to the candidate they believe, on the whole, the safest and best, and who are generally found on the side that promises the most practical and wholesome reforms. Mr. GREELEY has made professions of reform but stepping-stones for an inordinate ambition. Our readers will remember that, in the heat of the severe struggle against corruption in this State and City, he stood aloof, contemptuously belittling it, and interposing insinuating pleas for the Tammany leaders. It was only when the people had gained their victory that he recognized its immense importance, and immediately set to work to pervert it to his own purposes. His present attitude as leader of a "Reform campaign," of which, if successful, the Tammany Ring are to have the spoils and he the honors, is a legitimate development from his course all through the bitter fight made for real reform these last two years. He is now the Democratic candidate, and every sensible man will see that he is also the Tammany candidate. As such he must stand or fall. As such the voters of the country must decide whether to aid him or defeat him.

For ourselves, we have no doubt of the result. The good sense, honesty, and patriotism of the people are against Mr. GREELEY. We have only to urge the Republican leaders to see that these elements of strength are fairly enlisted, that the merits of the case are distinctly brought home to every voter, and that all who ought to advance their honest convictions by their votes are aroused to do so. And as Mr. GREELEY has declared beforehand that his success depends on carrying this State, and has, after the manner of TWEED, already announced the majority he expects, it is in this State that victory for the cause of honesty and good government should be most earnestly and wisely labored for.

The Unjust Judges.

It has been among the sharp "dodges" of the Fenton-Greeley faction to take up the cry of "Reform," and turn it to their own dishonest purposes. They opposed Reform when we were trying to accomplish it. Even now they are in league with that very Tammany gang which we have labored for years past to destroy. Yesterday, a great flag was suspended in the City Hall Park, with this inscription upon it: "Tammany responds to the nomination of the Baltimore Convention." By orders of the "Sachems," a hundred guns were also fired as a Tammany salute to GREELEY. In the Tribune there appeared a defense of Sheriff BRENNAN, who is daily defrauding the City, as we have conclusively proved; and a boast that the "Blossom Club" (TWEED'S) anxiously awaited the nomination of GREELEY. Here are evidences enough for one day that the Greeley men are identical with the Tammany gang—that they are working hand in hand;—and, no doubt, it is considered by the combined forces an exceedingly "smart" thing to take the Reform weapon out of the hands of Reformers and turn it against them.

But, although such a trick may succeed for a short time, the people will eventually detect and despise it—especially when it is bolstered up by manifest deception and misrepresentation. The people will never believe that FENTON, a worthy associate of TWEED—a man in every respect of like character to TWEED'S—is likely to care a "straw" about Reform. And the attempts of Mr. GREELEY'S own organ (which we ought to remember is "not an organ") to assist the Democratic candidate by false assertions will equally fall to the ground. Of late, the Tribune has taken great delight in asserting that to it is owing the purification of the Bench now going on. It has even gone further than this, and boldly asserted that the TIMES "has given no helping hand in the fight."

Such statements as these prove that GREELEY does not even know what truth means. It must surely be in the recollection of most of our readers and contemporaries, and of all members of the Bar, that we have worked unceasingly for years past to bring the unjust Judges to punishment. This is matter of record, easy to be proved from our files, and not to be changed by absurd falsehoods. We appeal to every honest member of the Bar in this City to state from which source he has derived most assistance and encouragement—from us or from the Tribune? The Tribune has over and over again praised BARNARD. It had not a word to say about CARDOZO'S "Star Chamber," which we exposed and caused to be closed a year or two ago. In fact, it has worked with that notorious and infamous libeller, DANA of the Sun, to shield BARNARD, and to discourage all attempts at Reform. Out of its own mouth can it be condemned. Listen to its boasts of yesterday:

"The TIMES gave no helping hand in that fight until its success was assured. The Tribune published its charges of malfeasance against these Judges as early as Nov. 15, 1871. The TIMES had not a word to say in support until Feb. 6, 1872, the very day that the Judiciary Committee of the Assembly began proceedings against BARNARD and CARDOZO."

The foolish man who wrote this is so ignorant of the circumstances attending the long battle against the unjust Judges, that he actually imagines the struggle began in November, 1871. Why, for years previously to that we had so perseveringly attacked BARNARD, CARDOZO, and MCCUNN, that we had incurred their bitterest resentment. They told us they would drive us out of the City; that they would seize our property; that they would throw us into prison—nor were these by any means idle threats, considering the unlimited power they exercised. On March 12, 1866, we exposed one of BARNARD'S extraordinary decisions. On Nov. 23, 1868, BARNARD replied with a lame defense to fresh charges against him. On Nov. 25, 1868, he delivered a long tirade against us from the Bench, and threatened a presentment for libel against us; and we challenged him to make it. He again abused us from the Bench on Dec. 8, 1868. From that time to the present, we have never let him and his confederates alone. We were the first to urge the Bar to rise in opposition to the corrupt Bench, and we were among the earliest to suggest the formation of the Bar Association.

Are not these facts remembered by the public? Yet the Tribune has the immeasurable impudence to assert that it has brought the Judges to punishment, while the TIMES remained silent! The foregoing facts speak for themselves, but there are still others which we may be pardoned for recalling. We have been threatened over and over again with BARNARD'S arbitrary injunctions and arrests. When the late Mr. RAYMOND died, his reputation was assailed with vile and filthy abuse by BARNARD from the Bench. After that, BARNARD singled out another gentleman connected with this paper, and accused him of an offense which only a ruffian like BARNARD himself could commit. BARNARD'S ally, C. A. DANA, has since followed in the same track, so far as he dared; and when BARNARD is disposed of, it may be possible to bring him to justice for doing so. At any rate, we promise him that an attempt shall be made to compass that end, and it will then be seen whether the laws, under honest Judges, afford any protection to private character against the most wanton, wicked, and cowardly slanders. Already DANA is a fugitive from the law in Pennsylvania and New-Jersey—there will yet be a third State in which he will not dare to show his dishonest face. In short—not to dwell upon these points—there has not been a time, for years past, when we have not exposed and denounced the unjust Judges and all their confederates; and now the paper which has helped to shield them claims the credit for overthrowing them. It tried the same game after the downfall of the Tammany Ring, but the public shamed it into silence. We ask for no credit in the matter—but everybody will admit that it is hard to stand silent and be told that we have taken no part in a fight which we began and carried on almost single-handed, and in which we have been subjected to all kinds of vile assaults from "journalists" who disgrace their miserable calling.

Let all that be as it may—we undertake to go on with the fight until the job is finished. Then, having got rid of the corrupt Judges, there will be found means of bringing their open and secret allies to the punishment they so well deserve.

The Parisian Renaissance.

The goddess Fashion is rising once more from amid the smoke and débris of Paris, like Aphrodite from the foam of the sea. It is true that the flight of her High Priestess, EUGENIE, left darkness for a time about her chosen altar; but new stars have gathered thither, so that the gloom is dispelled, and the fragrant incense is curling upward as of yore. Paris, which, like her old race of Kings, seems to learn nothing and to forget nothing, is again joyous over the triumph of modistes, and spiked helmets are infinitely less thought of there than new bonnets. WORTH—not that which makes the man, but the woman—is largely credited with this revival, his superb conceptions in the way of costume being quite the rage in the capital. Among his latest achievements, those of arraying the Princesse DE METTERNICH and Mme. ALPHONSE DE ROTHSCHILD are blazoned as most "pyramidal," and have sent the lately besieged city into an ecstasy.

From the attention paid to the subject by the journals, it would seem that the dress mania is rampant once more in Paris, and infecting all classes of society. In fact, with the exception of cookery, no theme seems thought worthy of discussion in the volatile capital now save clothes. Of what moment, these writers seem to imply, are the tiresome vaticinations of the National Assembly, or the threadbare topic of the German occupation, compared with the grave and practical business of a "make-up" for the opera or the next ball? And what man or woman of sense will waste thought on the Army bill, or the Indemnity, that may so much more judiciously be expended on a fresh sauce or a new menu? The attitude is characteristic, and so to be expected, although, after the terrible humiliation of France, we might have hoped her people would have been a little tardier in crying "Vive la bagatelle!" Their alacrity, however, proves, among other things, that the fallen Empress was not alone responsible for the gay extravagance and wayward caprice of Paris during her tenure of the throne. Whether she were in or out of power, nay, even if the Red Prince were Governor of Paris, and the troops of Kaiser WILLIAM mounting guard at the Tuileries, doubtless the same passions and tastes would still become dominant, and Paris would still assert her sway, if not as mistress of the world, as supreme arbiter of its frocks and hats and cuisine.

Of this glory, at least, neither BISMARCK nor the Commune can deprive her. The army of France may be well or ill-organized, her debt may be large or small, her power among the nations may be puny or colossal, but none can wrest from her capital the splendid renown of its dress and its cookery. There might once, in the days of the "Grand Monarque," or of the older NAPOLEON, have been a nobler ambition; but what would you have? The natural bent in the case is clearly ineradicable for good or ill, and asserts itself no more and no less after Sedan than it would have done after a new Austerlitz or a new Jena.

A Candidate and his Showmen.

Mr. GREELEY has received an honor hitherto reserved for the wooly horse, the bearded girl, the What is It, and other monsters—he has received a first-class puff at the hands of Mr. BARNUM. There is no denying the fact that the great showman has done the thing neatly, and with quite as much effusion as he is wont to exhibit in returning thanks to the ladies and gentlemen who make his heart glad by thronging the mammoth tent, which the Tribune is good enough to remind us "comfortably seats 10,000 persons." We question if Mr. BARNUM ever descanted more eloquently on the claims upon the respect of the American people of JOICE HETH, the patriarchal nurse of our first President, than he does upon the virtues and abilities of the man who is so ambitious to become WASHINGTON'S latest successor. If Mr. GREELEY be all that the fancy of the admiring BARNUM paints him, then he is a natural phenomenon beside whom the scaly marvel of the Feejee mermaid turns pale. The enraptured showman depicts his hero as cute as BARNUM, with virtues as celestial as St. Paul, and with a twelve-parson power of intellect, whatever the exact measure of that may be. Next to the undying honor of having exhibited the What is It? and kindred marvels, Mr. BARNUM counts it the highest distinction of his life to be able to cast a ballot for HORACE GREELEY.

Thereupon the delighted Tribune proceeds to give Mr. BARNUM a free advertisement in return for his very superior puff, proudly informing the world at large that "the great menagerie and circus is now traveling through Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, and Iowa," and that its public-spirited proprietor is prepared to place it every afternoon at the disposal of the people "for political mass-meetings of either party."

This is truly patriotic. The howlings of the carnivors would not specially interfere with "the joint discussion and arguments" which Mr. BARNUM kindly suggests for the occupation of the people in mass-meeting assembled under his mammoth tent. Perhaps the fat woman, the What is It, and the cannibals might be induced to tell what they know about GREELEY, or to give their sentiments regarding the shocking "nepotism" of this depraved Administration. Any way, those who come to talk might remain to pay, to the mutual benefit of Mr. BARNUM, and of "the wisdom and good principles of the American people."

From the fervor of Mr. BARNUM'S puff, proudly acknowledged by the Tribune of yesterday, one might have supposed that he had just discovered a new and profitable humbug. To dispel this idea, it is sufficient to read the gushing account given by an Express reporter of how Mr. GREELEY received the news of his nomination at Baltimore. At 1½ P. M. we are assured that "our later Franklin" was sleeping "the peaceful sleep of a wearied child," surrounded by "paintings and engravings of historical scenes and political magnates" in a parlor of the Lincoln Club. That is to say, he slept as soundly as a "vexatious fly," whose gambols were watched by the reporter, would let him. Whether Mr. GREELEY'S observations in regard to that fly were as gentle as those of my Uncle Toby on a similar occasion is a fact that must be forever lost to history. The Express reporter failed to record it, and a messenger from the Tribune office with news from Baltimore put an end to Mr. GREELEY'S slumbers and dismissed that fly into obscurity.

We are compelled to say that for a man who was so innocently sleeping a few minutes ago, the conduct of the Sage exhibited a slight want of ingenuousness. He tried his best, says the reporter, to seem engrossed in the contents of a letter which he hastily picked up, and was probably regarding upside down. After a fitting acknowledgment of the congratulations of this gushing reporter, who seems to have been emboldened to take the place of the "vexatious fly," Mr. GREELEY subsided into the task of "seeming unconcerned." We trust that the perpetual candidate will see that this habit of "seeming" is apt to have a depressing effect upon his friends, to whom the frequent recurrence of a tendency to noonday slumbers might only suggest the exceeding innocence of their hero. There are people who, in spite of Mr. BARNUM'S puff, will persist in believing that Mr. GREELEY'S honesty, philosophy and wood-chopping have a more direct connection with his actual self than the wool had with the horse of the great showman. In justice to such simple souls, Mr. GREELEY should give up his tricks of "seeming."

A Missouri Mayor.

The post of City Marshal in a far Western town is evidently not an enviable one. Having to deal with the roughest class of frontier population, Texas cattle drovers, scouts and miners, gentry accustomed to shoot on sight and usually drunk—the conservator of the public peace, if he discharges his duties at all, constantly carries his life in his hands. Generally it is only by selecting for the position one who is readier with his weapon and more relentless in its use than the roughs themselves, that any satisfactory results at all are achieved. Of one town in Colorado it is recorded that Marshal after Marshal had been shot down in his tracks, in chance mêlée or premeditated ambush, when the famous "Wild BILL" was prevailed on to take the post. This excellent person bears the reputation of never missing his man when he has leveled his fatal pistol, and of having by a judicious exercise of this engaging talent killed more men than any other on the Western frontier. "Wild BILL" was appointed City Marshal, and for a while thereafter there was comparative quiet in this Colorado pandemonium. If two drunken drovers persisted in the luxury of a free fight within corporate limits, the Marshal hastened at once to the spot and ordered them to put up their weapons. If they hesitated so much as an instant, he promptly shot them dead, and by this simple and effective use of his prerogative vindicated the civic proprieties and his own official authority.

But even "Wild BILL" proved in the end unable to cope with the murderous lawlessness of the place, and was forced eventually to resign, in order to save his life. A colleague in Kansas City, Mo., was less fortunate or less discreet. City Marshal TAYLOR had been chosen for precisely the same qualities which commended "Wild BILL" to the suffrages of his Colorado fellow-citizens. Although not yet twenty-four, he had made himself conspicuous for dauntless courage and personal prowess, and the desperadoes who frequented the town were kept in restraint by fear of his single arm. But at last he has proved a trifle slower than occasion demanded, and the electors of Kansas City have leisure to cast about them for a new Marshal. It is not unlikely, also, that they may be called upon at the same time to select a new Mayor; for it is the latter official who has amused himself by pistoling the former.

The whole affair is characteristic of the region. The Mayor, whose name is BOYD, and who seems gifted with true Western vivacity, had been, in a liberal construction of magisterial functions, indulging in the pasttime of beating a citizen in the street. For this the Marshal undertook to arrest the Mayor, and approached him for that purpose as he was sitting in the evening under the shade of his vine and fig-tree, and perhaps reviewing plans for another morning's amusement. The Marshal announced his object; the Mayor assented with amiable alacrity, and, immediately drawing a Derringer, shot the Marshal dead. He then barricaded his house, and for some time refused to give himself up for fear of being lynched. Ultimately this natural apprehension was allayed, and the mayorial assassin was safely lodged in jail.

Mr. BOYD is probably not a fair type of even border Mayors. But such an episode as this, occuring within so old a State as Missouri, suggests that that district might make a fruitful field for missionary labor. A Mayor beating citizens and murdering marshals is certainly a novel spectacle. New-York has not the best Mayor in the world, but we may still be thankful that he is not Mayor BOYD.

A Word for the Car-Drivers.

For pure monotony, the dull, plodding repetition, hour after hour, and day after day, of exactly the same thing, the life of a city car-driver is probably unequaled. Were his route through the country, were the sight of green fields and running streams to relieve the tedium of his routine, the case would be modified. But the car-driver is compelled, during the long stretch of his day, to jog past the same everlasting blocks of dusty buildings and arid squares, to stare at the same shops and signs, and to go through the same mechanical processes of stopping and going on in obedience to the bell of the conductor. He has not even the poor satisfaction of regulating his own movements, but, like a horse in a tread-mill, must describe his eternal round at the behest of a power behind. There is much to commisserate in a life like this, and much to call for more consideration than is commonly shown.

Why, for example, should these poor men be obliged to keep on their legs all day, when driving? In a hot season, such as we are passing through, it is too much to exact from any human being whatever, that he should remain standing for such a length of time, surrounded, as he is, by so many other discomforts. Your omnibus-driver sits perched in his airy elevation with an umbrella over his head, and commonly a good, big seat to himself. The drivers of carriages of every sort have the same privilege. Even the teamsters of trucks and drays can sit at pleasure. Only the luckless drivers of cars are condemned to dispense with a relief, the total absence of which is not only extremely exhausting, but, as we are assured by physicians, may prove very injurious. Were there good reasons for this practice of making the car-drivers stand all day to balance against its obvious disadvantages, the affair would be different; but, if there are such reasons, we fail to see them. Of course, it is important that the driver should keep his wits about him, should attend to his brakes promptly, should be always alert to avoid collision, and to respond to his bell. We suppose that the chief excuse for making him stand is that his faculties are best kept up to the mark by that position, that he is less likely to wander, or fall asleep when standing than sitting. This notion is probably altogether fallacious. It is irrational to believe that a man's brain and senses can be kept clearer by tiring his legs, and generally overstraining his system.

The truth is, a comfortable seat, adjustable to the platform at either end of the car, should be provided, and the present barbarous custom abolished. A sitting man takes up more room perhaps than a standing man; but really the horse-railroad companies have had a very good turn at jamming people together in impossible spaces, and ought by this time to be able to submit to even this dismal sacrifice. Thanks to Mr. BERGH and his associates, a good deal has been done of late for the unhappy car-horses; let us see now if something humane cannot be done for their almost equally unfortunate drivers.

MINOR TOPICS.

The World yesterday was very candid in its estimate of its own reporters. It declared that they had sent it from Baltimore "ornate descriptions, flights of rhetoric, costly and unbusiness-like writing, decorated and figurative rhetoric, fustian, elaborate fine writing, tawdriness of external description," &c., &c. Most people will think that the reporters thus sneered at have adapted their style perfectly to the journal they represent, and have, indeed, worked hard to cover up the disgraceful figure their chiefs cut in the present contest. Those chiefs have attacked and insulted GREELEY, have abused him in all the long words in the Dictionary, and have declared that no honest Democrat can possibly support him; yet they announce their intention of supporting him—and this they call "independent journalism." Having taken elaborate pains to prove that it would be disgraceful to do a certain thing, they immediately set to work to do that thing, with much whining and snivelling. Everybody knew, of course, when the World set out in its opposition to GREELEY, that it would soon turn tail on itself, for (not to put too fine a point upon it) it never had as much pluck as a louse; but that while acting in the most despicable manner it should preach about its "high tone," "morality," &c., is an unnecessary insult to its readers. We all anticipated that it would cry and run away. Its pitiful yells only compel people to call it dishonest as well as unutterably stupid. It had a manly policy before it; and of course it deserted it—what else could you expect? It was bound to come round to its old Tammany supporters—but why beat a gong, and call the public round it to see it eat its dirty dish of humble pie? After all, the World and the Democratic candidate will be very well matched.

We commend Mr. HARRISON TONE, of the Ottawa Herald, Ottawa, Kansas, as an ornament to our profession. In a recent speech before the Alumni of Antioch, he had the courage to say:

"Thus Kansas has no special inducements to offer to those who want to go West. The professions are already more than filled, business is overrun, and farming of itself does not pay."

If all the local editors would tell the truth as plainly, Mr. GREELEY'S occupation as President of the National Bureau of Migration (in which capacity he invited those who trusted him to deposit their funds in the Bowling-green Savings Bank) would be gone.

The habit of allowing logs to drift about in New-York Bay was almost attended with a very serious accident yesterday. When on the down trip, early in the morning, the North Shore Ferry-boat Pomona struck a long piece of wood with such force that it became wedged between the paddle of one of the wheels, and prevented the vessel from moving either backward or forward for nearly an hour, during which time the engineer, pilot, and deck-hands labored with great zeal to get free. The passengers, naturally enough, were considerably excited, believing that the shaft had been broken, and that an explosion was about to take place. Fortunately, however, no injury was done; but there was a good deal of inconvenience experienced by persons who thronged the different landing places, and looked in vain for some means of getting to New-York. Considering the fact that accidents of this kind have often occurred to side-wheel steamers, it is somewhat surprising that no system has yet been organized for the purpose of having all floating matter of a dangerous character picked up. The experiment would not cost a great deal, while the benefit to be derived from it would be of no little importance, more particularly to the residents of Staten Island, who are not now so well pleased with the facilities for traveling to and from the City as to be able to afford much loss of time.

Furious hurricanes have swept the eastern coast of Madagascar of late, causing a great deal of destruction. In some cases whole towns have been leveled to the ground. Ships were driven on shore, churches destroyed, and strong trees, even so tenacious as the cocoa-nut palm, actually torn up by the roots. The violent perturbations of nature which have taken form in tremendous freshets in India, Italy, and elsewhere, in typhoons in the China seas, and in heavy gales in the usually gentle Pacific, are thus having correspondent outbreaks in the Southern Hemisphere, and we should not be surprised to hear of similar phenomena in the Australian Archipelago and in South America. It may not be possible, as yet, to connect these manifestations by any certain physical laws, but the number of cases in which they rapidly succeed each other, implies a connection which science may be expected one day to determine.

Pigeon races are no new things under the sun, but the scale on which they have just now been carried out from the Crystal Palace, at Sydenham, is decidedly so. "Colombophily"—if the word may be forgiven—must be on the increase in England, the taste, which is derived from Belgium, having been stimulated, apparently, by the incidents of the Franco-Prussian war. A fortnight ago, at the Crystal Palace, one hundred birds were started at once for Brussels, then a second flight of fifty, to Manchester, Leeds, and other places in the North. After this there were shorter races to Oxford, Brighton and Reading. As adjuncts to these diversions, various pigeon curiosities were on view, such as microscopic telegrams, sent into Paris during the siege, pigeon-racing maps, and the like. The sport is harmless and interesting enough and may sometimes be useful. In the main, however, the telegraph beats the pigeon very much as steam does the horse.

Mrs. ELLIOTT, the unfortunate lunatic who strangled her daughter on the 5th of this month, was yesterday committed to jail "until her mental condition be ascertained by competent judicial authorities." A case of this kind, in which the truth is so plain, brings out in curious relief the absurdity of the plea so fashionable in cases of murder. It is to be noticed that in this case the real lunatic is sent to jail to await judicial action. In the other cases the alleged lunatics are allowed to go at large after a Judge and jury have pronounced them insane enough to take life.

ITHACA AND THE GORGE.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

"Minnehaha is the luckiest waterfall in the world. It has achieved more renown on a smaller capital of performance than any other I ever saw. Norway has a thousand nameless falls of greater height and beauty. Ithaca, N. Y., has two score only locally known. But this pretty, unpretending tumble of less than a hundred feet, is celebrated all over the world. There is a great deal in luck, as every sudden favorite of the public discovers in the course of time."—Bayard Taylor's Letters from the Northwest, 1871.

Central New-York, or the "Lake Country," is famed, and justly so, for the combination of wild, picturesque scenery, high fertility and cultivation.

The heart of this country lies contiguous to Lakes Cayuga and Seneca, and the "Glen," at Watkins, has been thronged by troops of tourists, who have been delighted by its beauty.

Around Ithaca is a concentration of all the best scenery of the entire section, which was always admitted; but so isolated has it been, that few, comparatively, have left the great thoroughfares to explore the beauties that lie around about the town. But of late the railroad-building mania has burst out, and the iron rails are extending in every direction, making her central by communication, as she is geographically, to the rest of the State. And the condensation and culmination of the best scenery around Ithaca is included in the gorge of Fall Creek, which to within the last two years has been practically impassable on account of great natural difficulties.

But the delighted tourist of today, who explores its beauties in safety, can scarce understand the dangers and difficulties that have been overcome by energy, capital and gunpowder.

Great masses of rock have been removed to make way for a path overhanging the dizzy height, and the man or woman with soul to appreciate the work of nature can commune with nature's God—can drink and be full. Near the entrance we come upon Ithaca Fall, 150 feet high—greater in altitude than the American Fall at Niagara, no comparison as to grandeur, but more enjoyable—leaving which, and after a rather tough scramble up and down a cliff 100 feet high, we come upon Forest Fall, 60 feet high, a perfect gem of a waterfall, set, as it is, in a frame-work of rocks and evergreens. Wending our way from this most beautiful creation, we come in succession upon "Rocky" and "Foaming" Falls, 30 the one and 55 the other feet high, which must be seen to be appreciated.

Soon after we leave the last, the ear is assailed with the booming, and upon turning a sharp bend of the ravine, the eye is greeted with a sight of Trip-hammer Fall, 40 feet high, but the water so compressed by the formation of rocks that an extraordinary effect is produced.

Emerging from the gorge proper, enjoying this and the amphitheatre that would fain confine the waters, we ascend a winding stair to the rocks above, and come upon "Thune" and Beebe Falls, respectively 215 and 18 feet high, and upon the beautiful Trip-hammer Grove and Beebe Dam, upon the waters of which boats will be moored for the use of visitors and picnic parties.

Emerging from the gorge proper, a short walk brings the tourist into the grounds of Cornell University—that young literary giant, the pride of the State, and justly so—four years in bringing a Faculty of about 40 and 700 students, and with endowment, buildings, library and cabinets that other institutions have been generations in trying to acquire, and where the lover of science can drink to repletion.

To the admirers of architecture this circuit of three miles is replete with interest, for aside from the grand structures that the McGraws, Sages and Sibleys are rearing commemorative of their devotion to advancement and progress, we find adjoining the Campus the extensive and perfectly elegant residence of President A. D. White, and very near that marvel of carving and durability, the new residence of Hon. Ezra Cornell.

From the University Campus one of the finest and most interesting views in New-York State is to be had. To the north, almost forty miles of lake view, and in the foreground and to the west and south a combination of hills aspiring to the dignity of mountains, of smiling fields and pleasant villages; in fact, there is no spot where the eye at a glance can take in so much that is typical of the wealth and greatness of the Empire State.

THE CHILDREN'S FUND.

Gratifying Response of the Public to the Call for Aid.

Progress of the Sick Relief Movement—A Thorough Canvass to be Made—The Picnic Today—What is Being Done With the Money.

Our readers continue to send in contributions to the Excursion Fund for poor children, and the aggregate amount so far received will enable us to aid a large number of sick children whose parents are too poor to procure medical attendance, as well as to get up excursions. The picnic project is now thoroughly arranged, and cannot fail to be successful, the details being in the hands of experienced persons who are assisting our reporters in every possible way. The dealers in supplies have been very liberal, and we have secured everything needed at almost cost price. Even truckmen who have been employed have done their share at the lowest rate. In fact, sympathy with the movement to help the poor children is expressed everywhere. We have to acknowledge today the receipt of $321, making the total amount received to date $2,556 25. The following are the subscriptions received yesterday:

We have also received a donation of one dozen bats, and a large box of balls, for the children, from Messrs. Peck & Snyder, of No. 126 Nassau-street.

As was stated in yesterday's TIMES, we are making arrangements for taking care of sick children and women, so that they may benefit by the fund as well as those children who are able to go on excursions. Rev. Mr. Schultz, the Missionary at the Five Points, made a tour of his district yesterday, and proposes to expend the money we have placed at his disposal ($100) in the most useful manner. The teachers of the Children's Aid Society's Industrial Schools held a meeting yesterday, several of them coming into town from their vacations for the purpose. It has been arranged by these teachers, acting on the advice of Mr. Moore Dupuy, the acting Secretary of the Society in Mr. Brace's absence, to at once make a tour of their respective school districts in search of deserving cases for aid. These teachers will report daily to Mr. George Calder, Superintendent of the Boys' Lodging-house, at No. 327 Rivington-street, the names and addresses of sick children who need medical attendance. We have arranged with Mr. Calder to send a physician to each case, who will be paid by us out of the fund. We have also placed a small sum ($20) in the hands of the missionary laboring in the Thirteenth Ward, for the purchase of ice wherever found to be needed in his rounds. He will receive more money when necessary. In other Wards the same plan will be adopted. It will thus be seen that the ground to be covered is an extensive one, and the funds necessary to aid all who positively need it will rise to a high figure. As the response to our appeals has been so nobly and generously made, we have no doubt that every dollar necessary to carry out the plan of relief can be easily raised.

If our contributors could only go with our reporters into the poor neighborhoods, see the wretchedness there so plainly visible, and hear the thanks of the poor women who find that they are to be assisted in a practical way, they would find ample reward for their benevolence. As a rule, the poor of a great City like this are suspicious of strangers, but they are now beginning to understand that the present movement is simply intended to aid the sick and suffering, so they are frankly stating their necessities, hoping to receive relief. The excursion idea is gaining in popularity, so that there will now be no difficulty in gathering up children for any number of picnics, especially as the mothers find that their sick ones are not to be forgotten. In a few days, the relief movement for sick children will be thoroughly systematized, and we shall be able to give our readers detailed reports of the amount of work performed and the mode of doing it.

Today, if the weather does not prove unfavorable, our first excursion will take place. Fully 500 children will participate in the festivities and pleasures of the day, and we are sanguine that the result will be a gratifying success. All the necessary supplies were got together last evening, and all the arrangements for a prompt and early start today are made. All along the route the picnic party will be attended by representatives of the ferry and railroad companies, and a sufficient Police escort will accompany the children to and from the grove selected. It will require two trucks to convey the provisions from the House of Industry to Hunter's Point, a fact which shows the amount of preparation that was necessary. To-morrow we shall publish an account of the picnic, and tell how the children enjoyed their holiday, and shall also give a detailed statement of the expenses incurred. By this means our readers will learn how the fund is being expended, and what amount of good is obtained therefrom.

On Saturday another excursion will take place under the care of the Children's Aid Society. The children who attend the Water-street, the Thirteenth Ward, the Second-street, the Avenue C and the Eleventh Ward Industrial Schools will attend the picnic to the number of about 800. One of Mr. Crossett's barges and attendant steamer has been engaged, and will await the excursionists at the foot of Eighth-street, East River. One thousand tickets have been printed, and the school-teachers are now distributing them. Each of the schools will assemble at its own school-house, and report in a body at the barge by 8 A. M. A band will be in attendance, and we have ordered the necessary supplies. There will be 2,000 sandwiches, 700 cakes, 150 quarts of ice-cream, 800 pounds of ice, 1 box of lemons, 200 quarts of milk, and sundry other articles. We have purchased 800 saucers, 800 spoons, and 800 cups, to be used on these excursions, as cheaper than hiring them from caterers. The party will proceed up the East River and the Sound to the Oriental Grove, on Long Island, where the children can enjoy themselves with the utmost freedom and safety. The same facilities will be furnished for games of all kinds, as on today's excursion, so that the children will no doubt have a glorious time. A third picnic will take place on the 19th inst., for the First Ward, Fifth Ward, Cottage-place, Fourteenth Ward and Avenue B Industrial Schools. The excursion will start from the foot of Christopher street, North River, on board of Mr. Crossett's barge, and proceed to Eagleswood Grove, up the Hudson. There will be fully seven hundred children present on that day. These are all of the dates yet decided, though arrangements for other picnics are in progress.

One of our reporters paid a visit yesterday to the sick and destitute of the Five Points and saw relief given to several families. In one room a family of six persons were found who had had nothing to eat all day, except some bread sent them from the House of Industry. The father had been disabled from work by a crippled hand for thirteen weeks, the eldest child, a girl of thirteen years, had gone to work stripping tobacco, and, being rather delicate, had fallen sick also. With the care of her helpless husband, sick daughter and three small children, the mother had made a desperate struggle to keep her family together, and, just when all seemed lost, the Five Points Missionary, Rev. E. M. Shultz, appeared, with some help from the TIMES fund, and thus their wants were supplied. The father is now able to work, but the daughter is still too weak to resume her work, and we intend to see that she is properly cared for.

In a dark, damp, back basement was found a hard-working woman with one child, a helpless cripple, and another suffering from an inflammation of the eyes. The father is sick in hospital; the mother had buried one child on the 4th inst., and in the midst of all her poverty felt the loss of her little one as keenly as only a mother can. She was provided out of our fund with some good wholesome groceries for herself and little ones, and will now get on more comfortably. In some cases, the sick children feel keenly the deprivation of going on our proposed excursions with their more robust brothers and sisters, but they were assured by the TIMES reporter, who accompanied the missionary, that they too should have some pleasure at home. There are now quite a large number of these little invalids on the books to be looked after and supplied with such delicacies as the sick crave for, and the piping "thank you" of their thin, feeble voices is certainly not too faint to reach the ears of Him who has promised a reward for the cup of cold water given in His name.

Any of our contributors who desire to make suggestions for the disposal of the fund are requested to call upon or write to our City Editor, Mr. G. F. Williams, who has worked night and day to secure the success of this enterprise, and to whose earnest labors we are much indebted.

The Children's Excursion.

From the Evening Mail.

One of the excursions for the poor children of the City which the TIMES has been getting up will take place to-morrow if the weather is favorable. Nearly $2,250 have been raised by voluntary subscriptions to defray expenses. Tickets have been, or are to be distributed indiscriminately by the City missionaries among the hundreds of little ones in the wretched quarters of the City; and in the morning a motley procession will be formed at the Five Points House of Industry to march by the nearest route to the ferry at the foot of James-street, thence to be taken to Hunter's Point and away to Lockwood's Grove, near Rockaway beach. An early start will be taken so that the happy holiday may be long, and all the materials for a high festival of fun will be provided. Swings, balls, and all the paraphernalia of juvenile sport—sandwiches, ice-cream, lemonade and other delicacies dear to the childish stomach will serve to make the excursion a thing to be remembered through all the long year to come, so full of privation and wretchedness to most of these little ones.

To think of an excursion of this kind for the children of poverty, who are deprived of the wholesome enjoyments that should be within the reach of all, was in itself kindly and generous, but to go practically to work to interest people in the plan, to raise the necessary funds and see that it was carried out, was better than any amount of good wishes and good intentions—it was a good deed. The happiness given to these poor children will be immense in proportion to the expense and trouble, and the TIMES managers, while getting credit for their philanthropy from all sorts of people, will find their highest commendation in the satisfaction of having done a noble thing. They have heeded the tenderest of divine injunctions, "Feed my lambs."

From the Buffalo Commercial.

There is something good in human nature after all. During the recent heated term in the Metropolis, the NEW-YORK TIMES made a strong appeal for the suffering little children, and intimated the propriety of getting up excursions in order to give the little wretches a breath of fresh air. No sooner was the suggestion made than it touched a chord in the breasts of those able to respond to the appeal. The first excursion takes place on Thursday, and a large fund is on hand to provide for others during the hot months. It is almost impossible to estimate the amount of pleasure that will be given to many a poor child in this simple way. Thousands of the little waifs in the great City will of course know nothing of the effort to give them a snatch at some of life's happy hours. But there will be hundreds who will be made to see that they are not wholly without friends ready and willing to put comfort within their reach.

FRANCE.

Discovery of Fresh Frauds Upon the Government.

A Court was, at latest advices, sitting at Lille to try M. Armand Guffroy, aged twenty-eight, merchant, residing at Lille; Madame Dubois-Meunier, aunt of the above, aged forty-two, negotiant at Brussels; M. Geisenheimer, commercial traveler, native of Frankfort, but whose residence has been in Paris for some years; M. Baron, barrister, and former Secretary-General to the Prefecture at Lille; M. Carlos Vaniaton, merchant, of Lille; M. Fontaine Delaunoy, merchant, of Lille, and M. J. Jowa, manufacturer, of Liege, on a charge of having defrauded the French Government in the sale of military stores. From the indictment it seems that MM. Fontaine, Delaunoy and Armand Guffroy were merchants at Lille, who offered their gratuitous services in obtaining numerous supplies, which in September, 1870, were needed for the troops in the department, and to provide which a sum of 15,000,000 francs had been allotted. The indictment specifies certain instances in which the accused are charged with defrauding the State. In one contract for supplies to the Prefecture, the two first named are stated to have divided 120,000 francs as profits. Upon several other contracts, amounting in all to 3,396,000 francs, Delaunoy, Guffroy and Meunier are charged with having made enormous profits. The National Guard of the department numbered 26,000 men. By an order of M. Gambetta, at that time Minister of War, a maximum price had been fixed for all articles required, which in the case of shirts was 3 francs, but in the Department of the Nord no less than 95,000 of these articles were supplied, at prices ranging from 3 francs 10 centimes to 4 francs. In November, 1870, the firm of Guffroy-Meunier contracted to supply 6,000 blankets at 6 francs 25 centimes. The authority of experts is cited in the indictment as warranting the statement that upon these last-mentioned contracts the profits of the accused must have exceeded 127 per cent. M. Baron is charged with combining with Guffroy and Delaunoy to purchase in unnecessary quantities and at excessive prices flannel vests and belts, which were obtained from Belgium, and upon which the frontier dues were evaded, although duly charged to the Prefecture. Upon contracts for shoes, it appears that 118,512 pairs were supplied at the cost of 1,000,000 francs. Thus each Mobilised National Guard cost forty francs for shoe-leather, or, rather, paste-board, for of that material were the soles composed. Men who left Lille with new shoes were barefoot a fortnight later. "Two or three days' marching in damp ground or snow caused new shoes to swell and the soles to open, and it was easy to thrust a finger through them." Nearly the whole of these shoes were supplied by Guffroy and Delaunoy, and by Vanlaton, and the prices charged were 10 francs 50 centimes, although M. Gambetta's regulation fixed 8 francs 50 centimes as the maximum price. The supply of jackets and pantaloons was also excessive, and the prices beyond the regulation limit. One of the witnesses, M. Chas, formerly Colonel of Garde Nationale Mobilisée, deposed that arms promised in October were only served out in November, and then he only obtained 700 that were of decidedly bad quality, the sword bayonet not fitting on to the barrels without filing. He complained to the General, and a second batch were supplied, but they were equally bad; the hammers came off the locks, and were lost by inexperienced soldiers. Some of his men under fire at the battle of Pont Noyelle were not able to reply to the Prussian fire. Nineteen other witnesses, who were all Mobilisés, and, with four exceptions, filled the post of Chef de Bataillon or Captain, deposed that the arms were of various lengths, of all kinds of make; that the barrels were too thin, of different calibre; that some were rifled and some were not; that others were rifled only through a portion of the length of the barrel; that old barrels had been fitted on to stocks made of green wood, and that the stocks of others were worm-eaten; that the bayonets would not fit on to the barrels; that the hammers came off, and were by some men carried in their pockets, by others tied on with string; that some guns were without nipples. The trial was expected to last several days.

AMUSEMENTS.

Musical.

THE GARDE REPUBLICAINE BAND.

The first concert by the band of the Paris Garde Républicaine occurred at the Rink, in Third-avenue, near Sixty-third-street, Tuesday evening. It was very largely attended, and the most enthusiastic anticipations of an excellent performance were amply fulfilled. The band of the Garde Républicaine is without question the finest heard since Mr. Gilmore's wholesale importation of organized bodies of musicians from Europe. It is better balanced than its English and German rivals, its proportions having been determined by the principles adopted by M. Adolphe Sax; its instruments, which include "saxhorns," "saxophones," and numerous recent inventions of M. Sax, are of a superior timbre; and the execution of the band, while it is quite above comparison with that of the Prussian force, is characterized by an expressiveness in which the faultless mechanical recital of the English players was relatively deficient. The special qualities of the executants under M. Paulus were clearly shown last night, and the overwhelming applause, which marked the close of each of the compositions they rendered, and which compelled as many repeats, proved that these qualities were understood and admired. The most important numbers of the programme were one of Meyerbeer's "Torchlight Marches," "The Introduction" and "Wedding March" from Wagner's "Lohengrin" and the overture to "William Tell." The three selections were interpreted with great variety and with unimpeachable precision and finish. A cavatina from "Lucrezia Borgia," for four clarionets in unison, displayed the beauty of tone and unswerving correctness of delivery of the instrumentalists; a solo by Arban introduced M. Sylvestre, a young cornet player, whose purity of tone and taste in phrasing were conspicuous in the andante passages; and, finally, an air and variations, by Mohr, brought out in turn all the soloists. A medley of patriotic tunes ended the concert. The band played last evening at the same place, and their efforts may be again enjoyed there this night.

THE STRAUSS CONCERTS.

The second of the Strauss concerts was given, at the Academy of Music, last evening. The house was crowded in every part, and the delight which the spirited recital of the conductor's compositions awakened was expressed by even more enthusiastic and prolonged demonstrations than were made on Monday. A note to the effect that the performance of the band was decidedly superior to their earliest execution under Herr Strauss' baton, is the only one suggested by yesterday's concert. The "Thousand and One Nights" waltz, the "Tritsch Tratsch" galop, the "Morgenblatter Waltz," and the "Annen" polka, were the selections from Herr Strauss' works on the bill, and the delivery of these was supplemented by the rendering of the "On the Blue Danube" waltz, of the "Pizzicato" polka, and of the "Circassian March." Additional instrumental music was supplied by the orchestra under the lead of Herr Bergmann, and Mr. Bonawitz contributed several piano-solos, one of which was devoted to an exposition of a fresh and graceful impromptu written by himself. The third and last Strauss concert may be attended to-morrow, when it is intended that Herr Strauss' new waltz, called "The Manhattan," shall be listened to.

THE FRENCH LIBERATION FUND.

An afternoon concert by the band of the French Garde Républicaine will be given, in aid of the Liberation Fund, at the Central Park Garden today. It will be commenced at two o'clock in the afternoon.

PROMISE OF THE FALL.

A few of the results of the Summer labors of American managers abroad can now be referred to, though a complete list of the engagements effected is not yet attainable. We have reason to believe that Mr. Maretzek has secured the services, for the Fall and Winter season, of the artists whose names follow: Mme. Pauline Lucca, Miss Clara Louise Kellogg and Mlle. Carlotta Grossi, sopranos; Mlle. Sanz, contralto; Signors Vizzani and Abrugnedo, tenors; Signor Sparapate, baritone; MM. Jamet and Coulon, bassos. Mr. Grau has arranged his concert troupe as below: Herr Anton Rubinstein, pianist; Miss Louise Liebhart, soprano; Herr Henri Wienawski, violinist; Mlle. Louise Ormeny, contralto; M. Rembielmsky, accompanist. Finally, the Aimée opera bouffe troupe has been formed. It is to include Mlle. Aimée, Mlle. Bonelli, Mlle. Louise Rolland, Mme. Juteau, and MM. Juteau, Nardin, Lécuyer, Gabel and Ginet.

MME. PESCHKA LEUTNER.

Mme. Peschka Leutner, the artist whose powerful voice and brilliant execution awoke an almost unbounded enthusiasm when heard at the Boston Jubilee, will sing at the Brooklyn Rink this evening. The band of the Prussian Grenadier Guards will lend their aid to the entertainment, which would be rendered most attractive by Mme. Leutner's unassisted exertions. We apprehend that Mme. Leutner will not be heard in this City.

Dramatic.

WOOD'S MUSEUM.

Mr. J. J. McCloskey's drama of "Pomp," with the author in the title rôle, was produced at this theatre on Monday evening. In "Pomp" the author has endeavored to supply a truthful picture of plantation life in the past. In the first act the audience has a view of the Mississippi; in the second, a glimpse is afforded of the mysteries of Voudooism, and a steamboat explosion is beheld; in the third act the scenery reproduces the Blue Ridge Mountains of the old Dominion, and in the fourth the spectator is offered a picture of the City of Washington. The principal character of the piece is a faithful servant, who is more heedful of his master's interests than of his own, and who in the end receives the reward of his truth and fidelity. Mr. McCloskey is supported by Messrs. Mestayer, Keene, Connor, Stewart and Debonay, and by Misses Arnot, Atherton, Page and Satterlee. Mr. Sheldon fills the part of Liza Jane, "one of the old sort," and his performance on Monday elicited roars of laughter. "Pomp" will be played twice daily during the present week. On Monday next, "Notre Dame" is to be produced.

Do Detectives Detect?

From the Chicago Post, July 8.

Morse's jewelry-store was robbed a month ago. No clue could be found to the robbers. Last Saturday night, after negotiations between Mr. Morse and the robbers, the greater part of the stolen goods was restored on the payment of $6,000 by Mr. Morse to the thieves. An "honest" man is said to have acted as the agent of the thieves in arranging terms with Mr. Morse. The goods were buried, it is known, inside the city limits, and to this day no police officer has obtained the slightest clue to the robbery, the robbers, or the restoration of their plunder.

THE POLITICAL FIELD.

Dishonest Purposes of the Tammany Democracy.

Reform in South Carolina—The Common Verdict—Minister Washburne's Views—An Accomplice of the Southern Democracy.

Tammany's Purposes.

From the Providence Journal, July 10.

But we may be told that the movement to which Tammany lends its aid did not originate with Tammany. Possibly not, although the testimony is that it did, that the Liberal Republican movement, if it was not planned by Tammany, was taken possession of by Tammany as soon as it assumed sufficient proportions to attract its serious attention. But be this as it may, it is certain that when the rebels of the South and the copperheads of the North unite with a new political movement, that movement is not in the interest of honest government. It is not their style. The Tammany Clubs do not go to Baltimore to infuse honesty into a political organization. The men who engineer these associations mean business, when they strike, and however little dependence may be placed on their arrangements with others, they are not apt to be cheated themselves. The accession of Tammany to the Greeley nomination, and the welcome reception it has received, are conclusive as to the character of an administration that might be expected under their joint auspices.

The Tammany Plan in Pennsylvania.

From the Pittsburg Commercial, July 9.

The coalition game in Pennsylvania is to elect Wallace to the Senate, and Greeley is for him. Whenever Cameron was a candidate Greeley supported him and rejoiced over his success. But times have changed. Surrounded by the Tammany thieves, he is worried lest Pennsylvania should go Republican in October, and the game for sending Wallace to the United States Senate and himself to the White House fail! The Republicans of Pennsylvania are not likely to imitate the folly of the farmer, who, to get rid of a wasp's nest, burnt his barn. They know a way to rid themselves of the nest and save the barn too.

The Common Verdict.

From the Cincinnati Gazette, July 6.

If Mr. Greeley thinks that in doing as he has done he retains his integrity and is faithful to his principles, he only shows that he was so imbecile in character that he had not the moral sense to distinguish principle and integrity from dishonesty and treachery. Not one of the party that he is trading with thinks him faithful to his former professions. The party that Mr. Greeley is bargaining with to elect him President, regards him as an apostate. They will never change their opinion of his treachery. Should they elect him, they will retain this opinion, and when his one term was over, and they could speak out, this would be the judgment they would fix in our political traditions. The Republican Party has the same opinion. It is not uncommon to see persons in the felon's dock who affirm their innocence in the face of positive proof and of the universal conviction. Mr. Greeley differs from the whole world if he affirms that, in doing as he has done, he asserted his principles and lost his integrity; but it is not likely that the moral sense of the world will be changed to fit his individual necessity, nor that all others will be pronounced wrong and he right.

Greeley's Alliance with Tammany.

From the Evening Post, July 10.

If Mr. Greeley never made, or nobody ever made for him, a corrupt bargain with Tammany Democrats, he is, nevertheless, the candidate of that party. If his nomination at Cincinnati was not a preconcerted thing, it nevertheless was hailed with delight by the worst rebel element that had gathered there from the South, and which will accept anything that promises disorder and disorganization; it was accepted with loathing and disgust by the very few mistaken Reformers who could bring themselves to tolerate it; and it was rejected with scorn by nearly all those who meant what they said when they asked for reform. If Mr. Greeley's unfitness for the position he covets cannot be proved by showing what he promised to pay for it, his unfitness is nevertheless manifest and is not denied, that we know of, by a single respectable journal, and hardly by a single sensible man in the country. After all that can be said, or cannot be said, this fact remains—this damning, unmistakable, and, so far as there is any danger of Mr. Greeley's election, this alarming fact, that he is the candidate of that party which in the administration of local governments, and the administration of the General Government, has reached, within the last quarter of a century, to an assumption of despotic power, and to its corrupt use, which has cost us already one war of four years; which is a constant menace of civil anarchy; is a constant threat of financial ruin; is a constant reproach to the cause of popular government, and is a uniform, if not an unanswerable, argument all over the world against republics and in favor of monarchy. Those who are willing to risk the return of such a party to power may vote for Greeley, because of some personal and selfish end they are to gain by his election; but, any man of common sense and common honesty who has nothing to gain by it, but yet advocates his election, seems to us to be under a delusion the most lamentable, or an infatuation little short of insanity.

Letter from Minister Washburne.

Hon. E. B. Washburne, under date of June 6, writes from Paris to a friend in Illinois:

I watch with great interest political matters at home. The nomination of Greeley was a complete farce. The people must rally and reelect Grant, who is an honest, true, brave, patriotic man. My regards to all old friends. My health is greatly improved. I hope you will have the railroad to Byron. Truly yours,

E. B. WASHBURNE.

The Southern Democrats' Accomplice.

From the Buffalo Commercial Advertiser, July 8.

No sane person doubts but that the election of Horace Greeley would substantially give the Southern Democracy control of the Government. Mr. Greeley will be nominated at their dictation, and if he is elected they will be his chief advisers. With him in the White House they will be perfectly satisfied. Hence their great enthusiasm in supporting him.

Reform in South Carolina—Views of Judge Orr.

A correspondent of the Charleston News has reported a conversation recently held with Judge James L. Orr, the most important portions of which are embodied in the following extracts from his remarks:

"It is evident that any reform to be accomplished in our State affairs must be accomplished by the Republican Party. The masses that compose the Republican majority are the colored people of the State, and their devotion to the Republican Party is not to be altered by arguments as to the comparative correctness of the principles of the two parties. Such arguments are in the main above their comprehension, and if it could be logically proved (as, mind you, I don't think it could) that the tenets of the Democratic Party were better than those of the Republicans, the colored masses would still cling to the latter party, through a sentiment which, having its origin in gratitude to the Republican Party for its benefits conferred, has now grown to an instinct of devotion to that party. But the colored masses are still disposed to favor honesty in the administration of affairs rather than rascality, because they have had no share of the plunder, but have, on the contrary, had to endure their share of the loss—because the burden of exhorbitance in taxation and profligacy in Government must eventually be borne by the poor laborers.

What they want now more than anything else is honest Republican leaders. Their choice of leaders has hitherto been confined to the "carpet-baggers," because they were the only men professing Republicanism who possessed any degree of intelligence and education. Now the time has come when the white men of this State, native South Carolinians, should resume their natural leadership in the affairs of their own State, and this they can only do by embracing Republicanism and putting themselves at the head of the Republican colored masses. There can be no more sacrifice of principle in Democrats voting for Grant than in their voting for Greeley. Both are Republicans, and they renounce their Democracy in voting for either. It is not as though the contest in this State were upon abstract principles of political economy, or between Democratic and Republican principles. The Democrats of South Carolina have shown themselves willing to accept the fundamental principles of Republicanism. All they want now, so far as the State is concerned, is an honest and economical administration of affairs, and there is no man in this country more anxious for this consummation than President Grant himself. The present condition of affairs in South Carolina and Louisiana is a terrible burden for the Republican Party in the country to carry, and they are determined to purge the party of such diabolicness.

CORRESPONDENT—What white men belonging to this State can you mention, who are with you in this new movement?

Judge ORR—In this part of the State there are a good many. In Abbeville County there are Dr. Limbecker, Mr. McCasland, Mr. Tarrant, the Tolberts, Jacob Miller. At Abbeville Court-house, Mr. McKellar. At Greenwood, Mr. R. E. Hill, Robert Jones, T. B. Milford, J. P. Dupree, W. D. Mars, W. H. Taggart and James Martin. In Greenville there are Capt. Mims Sullivan, Mr. A. Blyth, Mr. W. H. Watson, and others. Here in Anderson there are Messrs. J. S. Murray, J. C. Featherston and Warren Wilkes. In Pickens there are Col. S. D. Goodlet and Mr. C. L. Hollingsworth. There are a good many others in these and other counties whose names I cannot think of, and there are others who have written to me to ask about the new movement, but have not yet committed themselves in its favor.

INDIANA.

Enthusiastic Republican State Convention—Difficulty of the Democrats in Obtaining a Candidate for Lieutenant-Governor.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

INDIANAPOLIS, July 10.—A Republican State Convention to nominate a candidate for Congress for State at large, and Presidential electors to correspond, met in this city today. Though a delegate Convention, it was very large and enthusiastic, and its action gives great satisfaction. Hon. William Williams, present member of Congress from the Tenth District, was nominated on the third ballot. Jonathan W. Gordon, of Indianapolis, a brilliant orator and scholar, was nominated elector. These nominations became necessary by the passage of the Supplemental Apportionment bill by Congress, which gives Indiana thirteen Representatives. Two contingent electors, one a colored man, were also nominated. A meeting of State and Congressional candidates and public speakers was also held, and a series of meetings for the entire State have been arranged, including appointments for distinguished speakers from abroad. Campaign fires in Indiana are in full blaze. Grant Clubs are popular, and in some localities have absorbed the entire Greeley element, of which the Democracy had made exaggerated estimates. The nomination of Greeley creates no enthusiasm. A simple indorsement would have had better effect for Democracy in Indiana.

It is stated that the declination of Mr. De Pauw, the Democratic candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, has been in the hands of the Central Committee several days. The nomination has been tendered to Rev. W. V. Browning, of Brown County, but he has not yet accepted.

In the afternoon session of the Republican Convention for the nomination of Congressman and Electors at large, Isaac Moore, of Warwick County, was elected to fill the vacancy caused by Gen. Kimball's resignation, and Major J. W. Gordon, of Indianapolis, was nominated for the other elector at large.

NORTH CAROLINA.

Extensive Preparations for the Coming Election.

WILMINGTON, N. C., July 10.—The State canvass is progressing amid unusual excitement. Both parties are making tremendous efforts. Secretaries Boutwell and Delano will make speeches for the Republicans next week. The Conservatives have a grand mass-meeting at Weldon on the 12th, and at Raleigh on the 16th. Messrs. Carl Schurz, Trumbull, Frank Blair, Thurman and other distinguished speakers are expected. Extensive preparations have been made, and a large gathering of the people from all portions of the State is looked for at both points. Nearly every county is being thoroughly canvassed, and in some of them candidates are making two speeches per day. The election takes place August 1, and it is thought the last week of the canvass will be the most exciting ever witnessed in the State.

The Effect of a Journey South on a Greeley Liberal.

From the Buffalo Commercial Advertiser, July 9.

The latest change of views from a trip through the Southern States is that of Dr. T. B. Selien, a resident of the village of Watkins, near Elmira, in this State. Mr. Selien is widely known in the central part of Southern New-York, and his statement with regard to these matters will not be disputed by those acquainted with him. He has just returned from Kentucky, where he had taken his wife to spend the Summer with relatives. The doctor, who is a shrewd observer, and a man of intelligence, reports that "the malignant rebels are unanimous in their support of Greeley, not as the New-York Tribune claims, because they accept the situation and are willing to become patriotic citizens of the Republic, but, as they themselves openly assert, in order that the may obtain power, and at as possible restore the condition of society which existed before the war." The Unionists, on the other hand, are for President Grant almost to a man, believing that their safety depends on his re-election. Mr. Selien left home a warm supporter of the Cincinnati nominees—his name was attached to a call for a Greeley and Brown meeting in Watkins, but he has returned, determined to do his best for the cause of Republicanism. He is convinced by what he saw and heard while in Kentucky that the peace of the country would be jeopardized by the success of Horace Greeley. The Southern Democrats want him for President because they know he will be in their hands all that they could wish or desire. The fact that the rebels are so very anxious for Greeley's election ought to be enough to cause every Union man to vote against him.

Grant and Wilson Club at East New-York.

A Grant and Wilson Club was organized at East New-York, some two weeks since, which promises to do good service in the coming campaign. They held a ratification meeting on the evening of the 9th inst., which was addressed by Messrs. Ostrander and Taylor, of Brooklyn, and Rev. Mr. Manning, (colored,) of Williamsburg. A great deal of enthusiasm prevailed, and the Club expect to gather into their fold the Republicans of the town and a great many Democrats who prefer Grant to Greeley.

Transformations in Connecticut.

From the New-Haven Journal, July 8.

Somebody writes to the Tribune that the towns hereabout are all alive with Greeley. In addition to such popular leaders as Dr. J. J. Jacques and George Washington Rogers, of Meriden, we are informed that the ranks have been recruited by "Wm. H. Pond, of Milford; Dr. N. B. Welton, of Cheshire, and Robert L. Benham, of Wallingford, all life-long Republicans." We shall not be surprised to find in the next Tribune the conversion of Hon. James Gallagher, Hon. Thomas M. Waller and Hon. Henry A. Mattoon, announced as "life-long Republicans," turned Greeleyites.

Greeley's Bargain with the Tammany Ring.

From the Bangor (Me.) Whig, July 8.

The NEW-YORK TIMES charges—and the charge has not been, we believe, denied—that there is a bargain between Greeley and the Tammany Ring, in pursuance of which they support him. Through this bargain "Gov. Hoffman expects to get the renomination for Governor, and the Greeleyites and Fentonites will support him, provided he uses his influence in favor of Greeley for President." The Nation, always careful in its statements, also asserts that Mr. Greeley is daily contracting obligations to the Tammany politicians which he will be forced to discharge by quartering them on the Treasury, in the event of his election. It is certain the class of men who are making themselves prominent on his behalf in New-York are not in the habit of working for a living.

Grant Club at the Capital of Maine.

A Grant and Wilson Club was formed at Augusta, Me., on Saturday night last. Mayor Eveleth called the meeting to order, and Hon. William T. Johnson presided. Half hour speeches were made by Senator Morrill and Speaker Blaine. Mr. Morrill said that the conduct of the Democracy is hopeless—that they have decided to die at Baltimore, and Gen. Grant will be re-elected President by a larger majority than has been given for a Presidential candidate during the last twenty-five years. Speaker Blaine said that the nomination of Greeley at Cincinnati was made on account of his being a formidable obstacle to the success of the Union cause during the war, and that he would therefore receive the support of those at the South who are today rebels at heart. Both speakers were enthusiastically cheered.

The Virginia Democratic Committee's Plan of Representation.

The Richmond Whig manifests much disapproval of the new basis of representation prepared by the Democratic State Committee of Virginia. It says:

The plan "is based on the idea of a white man's party, and dwarfs the great Conservative party of the State from its original and grand proportions to a sectional faction;—and that, too, based on race. The absurdity of a Greeley committee, professing to desire the election of Greeley to the Presidency, basing its party on color, is painfully conspicuous. The misfortune is that our committeemen are so little reconstructed that they do not realize the ridiculous figure they cut, and can't help giving a Bourbonic twist to everything they touch. But this, preposterous as it is, is not the most objectionable feature of the plan. It sows the seed of discord in our own State and party, and works a cruel injustice to our Conservative friends, whose fortune it is to dwell in counties where there is a large preponderance of the black race. These are still to be allowed delegates as at present; but that there may be no mistake about the mockery, their delegates are entitled to no votes, or only to votes that will avail nothing. They are discredited, proscribed—slaughtered in the house of their friends."

General Notes.

The Connecticut Legislature wants to adjourn next week.

Secretary Delano will speak in Raleigh, N. C., July 24, and in Fayetteville July 25.

Secretary Boutwell will speak at Greensboro, N. C., on Wednesday next, and at Charlotte on the following day.

The Savannah Republican calls upon the Democratic papers and leaders of Georgia to cease their war upon Ben. H. Hill, as both unjust and senseless.

The Chenango Telegraph contradicts, "on the best authority, the report that Senator Foster favors Greeley. No man is more emphatic for Grant."

Hon. S. F. J. Tabue has announced himself as an independent Anti-Greeley Democratic candidate for Congress in the Seventh District of Kentucky.

Fifty-two Democrats of Freeport, Ill., a few days ago signed a paper declaring that under no circumstances will they vote for Greeley for President.

The Republican Committee of Cortland County has issued an eloquent address, exhorting all true Republicans to stand firm and steadfast by the Republican colors.

The Washington Star makes a doleful appeal to the Democrats of North Carolina to try to save the State at the coming election, and calls upon "every white-hearted son" to do his full duty.

There are two Democratic candidates for Congress in the Seventh District of Tennessee, and it has been decided to take a vote of the district at the August election to determine which the party prefers.

The Worcester (Mass.) Spy says: "Greeley's change is too manifest to be denied, and too reprehensible to be excused. His apostacy cannot be matched by anything like it in our political history."

The Louisiana Democratic Committee have published an address, in which they declare distinctly that there can be no bargain with Warmoth, whom they denounce as a "beggar of four years ago, who was foisted into office upon a moderate salary, yet today is worth millions."

The Republican conferees of the Pennsylvania Twenty-third District met at Pittsburg, Tuesday, to nominate a candidate for Congress, but as each one of the three counties voted for its own nominee, there was no choice after eleven ballots, and they adjourned until the 23d inst.

A number of masked men attacked the residence of a colored mail agent at Terre Haute, Ind., on Saturday night, while he was absent attending to his duties. They drove his family from the house, and destroyed most of his household furniture and goods. No cause can be assigned, except that the negro holds a position in the mail service.

Speaking of the approaching meeting of the Pennsylvania Republican Committee, the Harrisburg Journal says: "We want conciliation, while at the same time we must have a bold declaration of the necessity of obeying the will of the majority of the party as it is expressed in the candidates before the people. All factions, all rivalries, all interests inside of the party, must be as nearly as possible satisfied."

Local Notes.

Last evening a South Brooklyn Grant and Wilson Republican Campaign Club was organized at Court-street, near Pralem-street. John F. Henry was elected President; A. G. Coffin, G. F. Gregory, Wm. Thomas, L. S. Burnham and J. F. Holcomb were elected Vice-Presidents; A. H. Doty, Recording Secretary, and Dr. James Watt, Corresponding Secretary.

The new Grant and Wilson Club of the Eleventh Assembly District held its second regular meeting last evening at Republican Hall, Broadway and Twenty-third-street. Mr. Seymour A. Bunce, the President, was in the chair. The Chair announced that the Committee on Constitution and By-laws was to have reported a set of rules for the permanent organization of the Club, but the Chairman of the Committee is sick, and no report is ready, nor will it be before the next meeting. Short speeches were made by the Chairman, Judge John H. White and others, after which the meeting adjourned.

Exactly thirteen persons met last evening at No. 889 Third-avenue, under the name of the Twentieth Assembly District Greeley and Brown Club, to informally ratify the Baltimore nomination. A committee of five was appointed to confer with the Tammany Hall and other organizations of the district, for the purpose of consolidation. Some of the members said it was a shame the Club had not yet put up a banner or transparency, but one of the Committee appointed to attend to that matter asked where the money was to come from. The Transparency Committee was therefore discharged, and a Committee of one appointed to get a transparency as soon as possible. Col. Willis then made a speech, not unlike one he made four years ago, for the greatest living soldier of the age.

BOOKS CLOSE JULY 15.

THE AMERICAN BRIDGE COMPANY,
OF CHICAGO, ILL.

L. B. BOOMER, of Chicago, President.
(ORGANIZED AUG. 1, 1870.)

AUTHORIZED CAPITAL STOCK, $1,000,000

The whole amount of the authorized Capital Stock of this Company not having been issued, the balance thereof will be issued to subscribers at par, payments for same to be made in four installments of 25 per cent. each, viz.:

25 PER CENT. JULY 15, 1872.
25 PER CENT. AUG. 1, 1872.
25 PER CENT. SEPT. 1. 1872.
25 PER CENT., OCT. 1. 1872.

The Subscription Books now open at the office of the undersigned will be closed July 15, or as soon as the new stock is fully subscribed.

The total amount of stock issued at this time is $414,700, and on this basis the Company shows a present surplus of $136,290 97, and is now doing a flourishing business. One thousand men are constantly employed in their extensive works, and they now have on hand $1,250,000 of work for various railroads in the United States, among which may be mentioned the

CHICAGO, R. I. & PACIFIC,
CHICAGO & NORTH-WESTERN,
MICHIGAN CENTRAL,
MISSOURI PACIFIC,
ATLANTIC & PACIFIC, &c.

and the Company is now offered work to the amount of over $6,000,000, including some of the largest bridges ever built in this country; to accept of which, and further business, necessitates a larger working capital, as immense amounts of material have to be kept constantly on hand, and the Company are frequently obliged to receive, in part payment for their work, railroad and other bonds, which are perfectly good securities, but not always immediately marketable.

The career of the American Bridge Company, though brief, has already fully demonstrated the profitableness of the enterprise. The Company has constructed since its organization, and up to the 31st of December, 1871, a total of 38,127 feet of bridges, 18 turning tables, and 16 iron roofs, and pneumatic and screw pile substructures, costing $3,400,000, and have facilities for the construction of pneumatic piles unsurpassed by any Company in the country, and a capacity for the construction of at least 150 feet of bridges for every working day in the year.

The Iron Railroad and Highway Bridge at Leavenworth, of three spans of 345 feet each, and the Union Pacific Bridge across the Missouri River, of eleven spans of 250 feet each, were constructed by this Company.

The net profit arising from this business, as shown by the books of the Company up to the 31st of March, 1872, was the sum of $373,492 14, or at the rate of $224,089 28 per annum, being over 50 per cent. upon the capital stock then outstanding. With the proposed new structures, machinery, &c., the Company will have greater capacity, and the proceeds of the increased issue of stock will enable them to buy material for cash, thereby making a saving of from $50,000 to $75,000 per year.

The Company intend, chiefly, on above basis, to make dividends of from 20 to 25 per cent. per annum on the full amount of capital, $1,000,000, with a fair prospect of considerable increase.

The undersigned are prepared to give to those inquiring the fullest details and entire satisfaction regarding the reliability of the Company's statements, and the unquestioned integrity and ability of its officers.

We confidently commend to capitalists the above, as an investment worthy their attention.

The Road runs from Buffalo to the Detroit River, and is the Eastern link in the new AIR LINE FROM BUFFALO TO CHICAGO, and has been under construction for about two years past by railroad men who have seen the necessity for a STEEL RAIL, LOW GRADE SHORT ROUTE between the great railroad systems which diverge from Chicago, Toledo and Buffalo.

Among the builders of the road, by whose cash subscriptions 220 miles (out of 230) have already been graded, bridged and made ready for the superstructure, a large part of the steel rails bought, all of the materials for the stations, and a part of the equipment purchased, are:

MILTON COURTRIGHT, JOHN F. TRACY DAVID DOWS, WM. L. SCOTT, HENRY FARNHAM, R. A. FORSYTH, HENRY H. PORTER, JOHN M. BURKE, M. L. SYKES, JR., B. F. ALLEN, all directors, either in the Chicago and North west, or the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific; GEO. OPDYKE, of the Midland Road; JOHN B. ALLEN, SIDNEY DILLON, DANIEL DREW, J. S. CASEMENT, J. & J. CASEY, O. S. CHAPMAN, JOHN ROSS, DAVID STEWART, and F. H. WINSTON.

THE ROAD will be

33 MILES SHORTER THAN ANY OTHER ROAD,

either BUILT or in contemplation between Buffalo and Chicago, and will also shorten the distance between Toledo and Buffalo twenty-three miles.

THE MAXIMUM GRADE on the entire line does not exceed FIFTEEN FEET to the mile—and Ninety-six per cent of the road IS STRAIGHT.

THE ROAD WILL BE COMPLETED and in running order on or before Dec. 31 of this year.

The principal and interest of the bonds are payable either in New-York, London or Frankfort.

We confidently recommend the bonds to all classes of investors.

ABSOLUTE SECURITY
OVER 10 PER CENT. INCOME.

ARKANSAS STATE LOAN.

A LIMITED NUMBER OFFERED AT

70 Cents and Accrued Interest.

These Bonds were issued under act of the Legislature for the purpose of assisting the "Arkansas Central Railway," in accordance with section 6 of the Constitution of the State of Arkansas, which provides as follows: "The credit of the State or counties shall never be loaned for any purpose without the consent of the people thereof, expressed through the ballot-box," which act was submitted to the people at the general election held in November, 1868, and unanimously ratified by them. The Legislature of the State has no power to grant any additional aid whatever; consequently, the debt of the State cannot be increased, except by amending the Constitution through a vote of the whole people.

As an additional security, these bonds are guaranteed by the Arkansas Central Railway by special indorsement, recorded as a mortgage in every county through which the line passes, acting as a direct lien upon the property of the Company, its real estate, rolling stock and franchises.

It is also recorded that the "faith and credit of the State are solemnly and irrevocably pledged for the payment and redemption of the principal and interest of each and every bond."

Every possible safeguard surrounds them to protect the holder from the danger of corruption and fraud.

Unlike ordinary railway bonds, these now offered are negotiable at any time on the New-York Stock Exchange, as may be observed from the daily stock quotations.

The bonds are of the denomination of $1,000 each, payable to bearer, and therefore negotiable by simple delivery. The interest coupons attached to each bond are payable semi-annually at the office of the Union Trust Company, in New-York, by the Treasurer of the State, on the 1st day of October and April in each year, until the principal of the bonds is redeemed at par in 1888. HORSES AND

WORTH-STREET.

The Grading of the Street to be Commenced Immediately.

The Effect of the Improvements—Closing of the Houses—How the Inhabitants Take It—Scenes in the Neighborhood.

For some time past the Department of Public Works has begun to comprehend its duties and the requirements of public health and decency. Under the régime of Tweed its sole aim appeared to be by opening up the upper part of the island to invent new methods of squeezing money out of property-owners, and to make speculations in real estate in happy accord with their so-called improvements. While this went on there were Wards down-town whose condition was a public wrong and a public disgrace. Of these the Sixth Ward has been the most notorious. The lower part of Worth-street, from Centre-street to Chatham-square, had never been graded in all the years under which Tammany swayed the destinies of the City. Consequently, all the streets that joined with it, or crossed it, Park and Pearl streets, Baxter and Mulberry, were at the point of junction in a most miserable and shameful state. The junction of these streets composed the famous district of the Five Points, and the men who were responsible for the condition of the City, when told that Worth-street was not graded; that it had neither paving, guttering, crossing, nor sidewalk; that there was a deep hollow where Baxter and Mulberry streets crossed, filled with pestilential stagnant water; that the region about the Points was alternately a quagmire and a Sahara of poisonous dust, thought it a sufficient excuse for permitting this state of things to continue, that "the poor lived there."

To them it was a matter of indifference what sort of surroundings the poor had. The time has come, it is to be hoped, when it is understood that the condition of the inhabitants of the Worth-street district was the result as much of municipal neglect as of extreme poverty and its accompanying degradations. Whenever a district is neglected by the authorities, it will be neglected by the inhabitants. The neighborhood breathes the place, and never enter it; the inhabitants cling to it, and never leave it. So, in a few short years, a district in the heart of a great city becomes a plague spot, a centre of contagious diseases, a nursery for thieves, a home for the degraded, and a hiding-place for the criminal. It was so with the Five Points; and the evil originated from the neglect of the authorities to grade Worth-street, and to decently pave the streets that connect with and cross it.

Now, at last, the Department of Public Works is grading the neglected thoroughfare, and reforming the district in real earnest. Now, from No. 143, about 100 feet east of Centre-street, to its junction with the square, the level is being raised on an average about three feet and a half. Carts are continually arriving within this limit to dump their contents, which sometimes are of so questionable a character that an observer would naturally fear for the health of the neighborhood. The contractor gets a small sum from each cart, and has, in fact, allowed a trifle too much dumping, for in many places which are at least fourteen inches above what was required. It is considered that the roadbed will settle. It is generally understood in the neighborhood that Worth-street is to be paved with trap-block pavement immediately after the grading is completed, and the contractor has warned all the property-holders to have sidewalks to take them up, because if they do not, the flag-stones will become his perquisite. This suggests an inquiry as to the whereabouts of the granite blocks laid down some time ago, before the street was graded. They were removed by the contractor, and it is to be hoped, when new ones are laid down again when the grading is completed; otherwise, the property-owners will have to pay a second assessment for this very expensive pavement.

The condition of many of the houses affected by the change is somewhat ludicrous. One of them, a frightful wooden shanty built out upon the road, has been actually closed. The sidewalk comes right up to the doorway, and as the flooring is now three and a half feet below the road, there was no possible way of entering save by a harlequin leap head foremost. This door was a brick structure, the first floor of which was a rectifier, or, in the language of the quarter, a "bucket-shop," where alcoholic poison is retailed at remarkably low rates. At the windows above were many Jewish faces, which served partly to explain the sign, "Beno Israel Cedas Kodesh," adorning the dingy wall. The people in the bucket-shop appeared perfectly secure, confident that their brick walls would stand the shock; but there was unmistakable anxiety in the Jewish physiognomies, and the Israelites probably would have left their place, but they feared the rough Irish crowd gathered about.

In Mulberry-street Mr. Buckhout's engineers were making surveys for the under ground railway, and the old women of the neighborhood were evidently afraid of the theodolite. They inquired anxiously if it was from the Board of Health, and were evidently laboring under the idea that it was a new kind of disinfectant. The Jews and Italians were in a high state of jubilation, and were apparently calculating how much Mr. Vanderbilt would give each of them for their houses. In the street there are only slight changes effected by the grading of Worth-street.

The Orange Parade.

It was stated in yesterday's issue of the TIMES that on the occasion of the approaching parade of the Orange societies trouble might be anticipated from the "Boulevard men." It has since transpired that an organization has been started by a party in the confidence of the "roughs;" that arms are being collected, and extensive preparations made to oppose the progress of the intended parade. The Irish societies—religious and political—do not countenance such a movement, and are totally opposed to any interference with the Orange parade. It is stated that 4,000 men are enrolled in the organization.

The Derry Walls Lodge No. 2 of the Orange society, James Hale, W. M., met last evening at No. 2 Fourth-avenue to make arrangements for the parade on the 12th. A number of new members were enrolled, and measures taken to make the intended demonstration a decided success.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH.

Meeting of the Board Yesterday—Sanitary Reports—Fearful Mortality Record.

The Board of Health held a meeting yesterday, President Bosworth in the chair.

Commissioner Gross, Special Committee on Disinfection, reported that during seven days forty-nine miles of street s and street-gutters had been disinfected at an expense of $246 80, and an appropriation of $300 was made to continue the work. Assistant Inspector Leo made a report in regard to the condition of the establishment of the New-York Rendering Company, at the foot of West Thirty-eighth-street. Dr. Leo reports that he visited the establishment on the afternoon of the 3d inst., and found the offal boat in active operation. The stench about the place was intolerable. Decomposing carcases of horses covered the after-part of the boat, and the bodies of dead animals were found lying rotting in the sun in the road leading to the dock.

Dr. Leo also visited the fat-rendering establishment of M. Donohue & Co., at the foot of West Thirty-ninth-street, on the 8th inst., and found the work there going on in violation of the provision of the Sanitary Code. Mr. Donohue was arrested and held for trial in $500 bail by Justice Cox. The Board ordered the report on file and no definite action was taken.

The City Sanitary Inspector, Dr. E. H. Janes, presented a report in regard to the terribly filthy and unwholesome condition of a large structure at Forty-eighth-street and Lexington and Fourth avenues, owned by the New-York and Harlem Railroad Company, and occupied by them as a place for the loading of cars with brewery grains and other refuse matter. It is reported that the refuse matter is loaded in open cars, and then run out on the track to rot in the sun. The ground about the structure is completely saturated with the drippings from the cars, and the stench from this place is terrible, and permeates the entire neighborhood all of which is in violation of the provisions of the Sanitary Code. The Sanitary Committee, to whom this report was referred, recommended that the Harlem Railroad Company be ordered to load the refuse matter in water-tight cars, to be covered against the rays of the sun. The matter was referred to the Committee on Laws and Ordinances, and a special meeting of the Board will be held today, to take action in the matter.

A communication was received from the Commissioner of Public Works, calling the attention of the Board to quantities of decaying animal and vegetable matter floating in the slip at the foot of Charles street, North River, where one of the public baths is located. The matter was referred to the City Sanitary Inspector for investigation and report.

Commissioner Stephen Smith presented the following resolutions, which were adopted:

Resolved, That the City Sanitary Inspector, in conducting the inspection of tenement-houses pursuant to the orders of the Board, shall cause all violations of section 9 of the Tenement-house act and of the sanitary ordinances in respect to the cleanliness of the apartments, halls, stairways, passages, walls, ceilings, areas, courts, cellar-yards, alleys or out-houses, in or about such houses, to be carefully noted and reports thereon duly submitted.

Resolved, That whenever it shall appear that any building, or part thereof, is unfit for human habitation by reason of its want of repair, the City Sanitary Inspector shall forthwith report the fact to this Board, as provided by section 11 of the Tenement-house act.

Resolved, That the City Sanitary Inspector shall cause the ordinances of this Board regulating the exposure for sale of articles of food, and providing for the removal of such articles deemed to be unsound or unwholesome, to be enforced.

After some other business, the City Sanitary Inspector reported the removal of ten cases of small-pox to the hospital during the week.

Dr. Chas. P. Russell, Register of Records, reports as follows: During the past week there were registered 1,569 deaths, being an increase upon the previous week of 83, and an excess of 859 over the corresponding week of the past year. Zymotic diseases occasioned 832 deaths; constitutional, 168; local, 479; developmental, 44, and violent causes, 46. The fatal cases of small-pox increased from 21 to 29; those of measles from 15 to 36; those of scarlatina from 17 to 34; those of typhoid fever from 5 to 10; those of erysipelas from 2 to 8; those of puerperal fever from 0 to 4, and those of cerebro-spinal fever from 1 to 29, and those of diarrheal affections from 266 to 639. The deaths by diphtheria and croup diminished from 15 to 10, and those by whooping-cough amounted to the same number, 15, as in the previous week. The mortality of phthisis pulmonalis rose from 59 to 81, and that of the local respiratory affections from 45 to 55, of which pneumonia furnished 29 deaths. 196 persons succumbed to the effects of delirium tremens. The greatest weekly mortality from this cause ever recorded in this City, with one exception, viz.: that of the week ending July 21, 1866, during which 246 such cases were registered. The mean temperature of that week was 1.26° less than that of the week just closed. The total mortality of the past week has never been equaled in the history of New-York. The next largest number of deaths, viz: 1,362, is registered in the week ending July 27, 1866. The deadly influence of the intense heat and high humidity of the past week was exhibited not only directly in the great number of victims of sunstroke, many of whom were persons in robust health, but also indirectly as an accessory cause of death in cases of persons suffering from every variety of disease; 217 deaths were certified by Coroners, and 235 took place in institutions; 85 deaths, or 63 per cent. of the mortality, occurred among children less than five years of age, and 37 deaths among persons seventy years old and upward; 41 deaths were due to accident and negligence, 2 to homicide, and 3 to suicide.

The following were the principal meteorological features of the week, as recorded for this Department at the Cooper Union: Maximum temperature in the shade, 97°; in the sun, 128°; minimum temperature, 70°; mean temperature, 83.97°, being 8.91° higher than that of the corresponding period during the past ten years. Mean reading of barometer, 29.776 inch.; mean degree of humidity, 75.01.

THE GOTHAM MURDER.

Trial of James Burns for the Shooting of John O'Halloran—The Defense a Plea of Insanity.

The case of James Burns, indicted for the murder of John O'Holloran in the Gotham drinking-saloon, in the Bowery, on the morning of the 28th of April last, came up in the Court of General Sessions yesterday.

The Assistant District-Attorney, in opening the case, stated that O'Halloran was quietly sitting in the saloon with some friends, when Burns burst in with a pistol in his hand, ran up to him, and shot O'Halloran in the side, afterward following him up and firing again, the second ball lodging in the thigh.

The testimony of Dr. Marsh, Deputy-Coroner, was read, describing the wounds, and giving the opinion that death was caused by pericarditis and pleuritis from the pistol-shot wound.

James Leahey, of No. 69 Hester street, was the first witness. He was sitting with O'Halloran and a man named McCabe, about eight feet from the door of the saloon, with his back to the door, when Burns came in rapidly and called out "You —, get up;" McCabe cried, "Look out," and witness dodged his head; then O'Halloran got up, and witness saw Burns shoot him; O'Halloran ran out of a side-door, followed closely by Burns, and a moment after another shot was heard; neither O'Halloran nor Burns were intoxicated.

Patrick Hardigan, bar-keeper of the Gotham, testified to the quiet character of O'Halloran, and said that Burns had not been in the place for six months before the shooting.

Other witnesses having been examined, the prosecution here rested.

The prisoner's counsel, in opening, said that the prosecution had proved the prisoner's case, as from their own showing he must have been insane, killing his friend as he did, without warning, and without cause. Counsel was sure that the jury would see that Burns was suffering from delirium tremens.

Hiram D. Ferguson, a former Deputy Sheriff, testified: I have known the prisoner about twelve years; have known him to be insane twice; once was in last February, after he had been drinking, when I went to his residence, and he spoke of two men wanting to murder him and his family, and others who wanted to ruin him in business down-town; the other time was within a day or two of the shooting, when I met him in the City Hall Park, and he looked wild and said he was going up stairs to throw two men out of the window; I knew he was suffering from delirium tremens; I saw him on the night of the shooting, and he acted strangely; he was in the habit of going on long sprees.

The case will be resumed this morning.

Prostrated by the Heat.

The following cases of prostration by the heat were reported by the Police yesterday:

Felix Winsch, aged thirty-six, of No. 117 East Houston-street, while at work on the building No. 222 Second-street.

Benjamin Gibson, laborer, in Lawrence-street, near Broadway. Taken to Reception Hospital.

Charles Gerard, forty-three years of old, was overcome by heat while in the First Precinct, yesterday. He was attended by Dr. Bruce, of the Park Hospital, and sent home.

Owen Fitzimons, of Fifty-second-street, between First and Second avenues, was overcome by the heat in Twenty-fifth-street, near Broadway, and taken to his residence.

Michael Haas, fourteen years old, of No. 15 East Fifty-fifth-street, was found prostrated by heat at the corner of Broadway and John-street, and taken to the Park Hospital.

John Lynch, forty-seven years old, of No. 244 East Twenty-ninth-street, was found prostrated by heat at the corner of Twenty-ninth-street and Second-avenue, and taken to Bellevue Hospital.

Patrick Hickey, of No. 343 West Fifty-fourth-street, was found prostrated in the Tenth Precinct, and taken to his residence.

The following record at Dickinson's drug-store, No. 3 Park-row, will show the changes in the temperature yesterday, with the average for the same, as indicated by the thermometer: 3 A. M., 75°; 6 A. M., 78°; 9 A. M., 81°; 12 M., 86°; 3 P. M., 90°; 6 P. M., 76°; 9 P. M., 77°; 12 P. M., 76°. Average temperature yesterday, 79½°.

The special meeting of the Brooklyn Yacht Club, to determine on the time of the annual cruise, was held at the Club-room last night, the President, Mr. P. W. Ostrander, in the chair. The special business of the meeting being transacted, the meeting adjourned.

THE TURF.

The Saratoga Races.

No sooner have the musical echoes of the hoofs died away among the hills of New-Jersey than we are reminded that their clatter will soon be heard amidst the quiet shades of Saratoga. Already have the racing stables taken their departure to meet others from the far West and South, which have assembled at the Springs with all their strength. John Harper left Long Branch on Saturday, thus following on the heels of the fleeing McDaniel. The meeting begins on Saturday next, July 13, and will continue six days. The galaxy of racing stars at present at the Springs numbers nearly a hundred and fifty, and from this we should expect that the meeting will be full of excitement.

On the first day the Travers Stakes, for three-year olds, a mile and three-quarters, will be run. As this stake is one of the most valuable of the year, the contest for it is generally marked with a degree of interest greater than the decision of any other turf event. For the stake this year there is the large number of eighty-one entries, and the stake is worth $5,550. Col. McDaniel has four entered, among them Joe Daniels and Hubbard, and he expects to "gather it in;" but there are so many others who wish to put their fingers in the pie, that if the Colonel wins it, he will have to beat the fastest time on record. The second race is a sweepstakes, for all ages, a mile and a quarter. The race is worth $1,550 for the winner. There are sixteen entries, among them Harry Bassett, Littleton, Tubman, Orlolan and Chillicothe. This will be a grand contest, and Bassett will have as much as he can do to defeat Uncle Harper's game little son of Leamington and Fanny Holton. The third race is the Flash Stakes for two-year olds, half a mile, which has twenty-nine youngsters in. The stake is worth $1,950; and it will be a difficult matter to guess the winner. The second day will open with a steeple-chase for all ages, about two miles over an excellent course. The second race will be for a purse of $600 for all ages, to carry 100 pounds, a mile and three-quarters. And the third race a dash of three-quarters of a mile, for all ages; purse, $400. The third day will open with the Saratoga Stakes for two-year olds, three-quarters of a mile. There are forty-two entries, and the stake is worth $3,100. The second event is the Saratoga Cup, of two and a quarter miles, and once again will the great rivals, Harry Bassett and Longfellow, meet and do battle for their owners. The friends of Bassett assert that he was not in shape at Long Branch, and still have confidence in his ability to beat Longfellow. Time will tell, however. Closing the day's sport will be a dash of a mile and a half for three-year olds, purse of $600. The fourth day will be a "purse day," the first race being a dash of one mile, purse $600, for all ages; the second a selling race, purse $600, a mile and a half, and the third a purse of $800 for all ages, two miles. On the fifth day there will be a hurdle race of two miles over eight hurdles welter weights; a selling race for two-year olds, three-quarters of a mile, and the Sequel Stakes for three-year olds. In this there are twenty five nominations, the value of the stake being $2,000. The sixth and last day of the meeting will be an interesting one. The Alabama Stakes, for three-year old fillies, a mile and an eighth, is first to be decided. There are thirty-three nominations, and the value of the stake $2,650. Next is a dash of three miles for all ages, purse of $1,000, and McDaniel will not allow old Uncle John to go away with this prize without a tough struggle. Bringing the meeting to a close will be a Consolation Purse of $600, for all ages, a mile and a quarter. From the announcement of the Saratoga Association it will thus be seen that the sport on this last course will be greater than heretofore.

Imported Leamington, the Sire of Longfellow—His Pedigree and Performance.

Now that the two greatest horses on the American turf, Longfellow and Harry Bassett, have met, and victory having perched on the colors of Uncle John Harper, it will not be out of place to give a brief history of Longfellow's sire, imported Leamington.

The sire of Harry Bassett, Lexington, is well known to the public, as his pedigree has been heretofore given in full, and his performances duly expatiated upon. It is but just that Leamington should become as well known to the racing community, if for no other reason than being the sire of the great Longfellow, in view of his second meeting with his renowned antagonist at Saratoga.

The country is indebted to the enterprise and liberality of Mr. J. W. Cameron, of this City, for the importation of a horse that has done so much in improving the breed of our racing stock and thereby adding considerable wealth to the agricultural as well as racing interest. Leamington is a brown horse and was foaled in 1859, and is consequently nineteen years old. He was sired by Faugh-a-Ballagh, dam by Pantaloon, second dam Daphne, by Laurel; third dam Maid of Honor, by Champion, (son of Selim;) fourth dam Etiquette, by Orville; fifth dam Boadica by Alexander; sixth dam Brunette, by Amaranthus; seventh dam Mayfly, by Matchem; eighth dam by Anoaster Starling; ninth dam by Grasshopper; tenth dam by Sir M. Newton's Arabian; eleventh dam by Pert; twelfth dam by St. Martin's; thirteenth dam by Sir E. Hale's Arabian; fourteenth dam the Old Field Mare. Leamington is of good size, being a little over sixteen hands high. He has a fine, expressive head, with a white star in forehead; strong, muscular shoulders; magnificent back of great length; firm, muscular legs and powerful quarters. He has that strong propelling power which he imparts to all his progeny, and which particularly developed itself in his son Enquirer, who was undoubtedly the best three-year-old of his year, and who defeated that fine son of Lexington and Etham Lass, Kingfisher; Lynchburg, too, another son of Leamington, gave promise of rivaling Enquirer, but unfortunately broke down before he had fully entered upon his career. Leamington was trained early and made his debut on the turf in 1855, when two years old. He then started five times and won twice, the Woodcote Stakes at the Warwick Spring meeting, and the Chesterfield Stakes at Derby. In 1856 out of ten starts he won three times, viz.: The Trotteby Stakes at Wolverhampton, half a mile, the Town Plate at Warwick, one mile, and the Stewards' Cup at Shrewsbury, one mile. When four years old, the following year, he was started but five times, and captured the Chester Cup, of two and a quarter miles, the distance being the same as that for our Westchester and Saratoga Cups. In this race there were thirty-four horses started against him, but he cut them all down. His other win was the Goodwood Stakes of two and a half miles, and beat a field of eighteen. In 1858 he ran for the Cæsarwitch, but did not gain a place, but in 1859 he again won the Chester Cup, but was defeated in his three other stakes, but got a place in each. During his turf career he started twenty-five times and won seven times. In 1860 Leamington was retired from the active scenes of the turf to do good service in the harem, and in 1864 he sired thirteen winners, who won thirty-three races, and among the best of his get were Catalogue, Coup d'Etat, Lemonade, &c. The desire to gain so admirable a stallion for this country was universal, especially to cross with the Lexington mares, which at this period—1864-5—began to form our most valuable breeding stock. In 1865, the famous Rawcliffe stud was announced to be dispersed, in which were the fine stallions Newminster, Leamington, Claret, Jordan, and Fallow Buck. The sale took place on the 25th August of the same year, but before that Mr. Cameron purchased Leamington, together with other stock, which included the stallions Wanminster by Newminster, Hartington by Voltigeur, and Hampton Court by Young Melbourne, and the mares Jerusalem by Jericho, Eleanor by Voltigeur, Casemate by Chatham, Babby Kingston and Maid of Honor by Newminster. They arrived in this port in October in good order, and Leamington soon stood at the head of the Clifton stud. About three years ago Mr. Cameron sold Leamington to Mr. Aristides Welch, of Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia, who now owns him. There were many turfmen and breeders who predicted that the Leamingtons could not stay a distance at a high rate of speed, but the recent performances of Longfellow and others have set at rest all probable doubts of their staying qualities, especially when they come from Lexington mares, as in the case of Enquirer and Lyttleton or the hard-bottomed Glencoe mares. The services of Leamington are earnestly sought after by our breeders, and we are pleased to add that his progeny is rapidly increasing. As an exemplification of the high estimation in which Leamington is held by our turfmen, the fact may be mentioned that Mr. M. A. Littell, of this City, bred no less than six mares to him last year, among them Mary Clark, by Lexington, out of Eagless by Glencoe.

BASE BALL.

The Troys Defeat the Mutuals by 7 to 4.

The regular series between the Mutuals and Troys being already concluded, the match played between them on the Union Grounds yesterday was only an exhibition affair, not in any way affecting the championship, and consequently the attendance did not exceed 800 individuals. The showers which fell at intervals during the afternoon caused the suspension of the game twice, and eventually necessitated its conclusion on the eighth inning, the score being then 7 to 4 in favor of the Trojans. Both nines played finely, the Mutuals losing the game chiefly through the wild throwing of Boyd, Fulmer and Hicks also making unfortunate errors, although Fulmer, in a measure, retrieved himself by several fine catches.

BURGLARS ARRESTED.

"Frenchy," the Noted Thief, Caught in the Second Ward—Operations of the Gang in Beekman-Street.

About a month ago the premises of William H. Fowler & Co. were entered by burglars, who stole 600 revolvers. The Police at once suspected a noted burglar known as "Frenchy," who affiliated with the gang of thieves at the corner of Wooster and West Houston streets, known as "Brunker's Gang." Search was made for him, but he could not be found. Yesterday morning he was caught in the act of perpetrating a similar burglary in the Second Precinct. Messrs. Lau & Garlich, wholesale dealers in guns, pistols and fancy cutlery, have their offices on the second and third floors of the building No. 72 Beekman-street. No. 78 Beekman-street is occupied on the first floor as a picture-store, and the remainder of the house is tenanted by different families. The hall door is open always, and through this house access can easily be had to the roof of Messrs. Lau & Garlichs' premises. Roundsman Tinte entered Lau & Garlich's at 12 o'clock on Tuesday night, and found everything all right. Roundsman Kelly went in at 12¼ and heard some one run rapidly upstairs. He gave the alarm, and the place was speedily surrounded by officers from the Beekman-street Station. Officer Davins arrested, at the corner of Cliff-street, one Asher Hedden, a laborer, of No. 228 East Broadway, who it was thought had been acting as a "pipe," or "watcher," for the burglars. The Police then proceeded to investigate, and found that the burglars had got on the roof, by the way of No. 78, and taking a small ladder out of the picture-frame establishment, cut a hole in the roof large enough to admit a man, and so lowered themselves by means of the ladder to the floor beneath. The Police then searched the picture-frame premises, and concealed behind some old rubbish in a room on the upper floor Roundsman Kelly discovered the noted "Frenchy." "Frenchy" had dropped his shoes during his flight from Messrs. Lau & Garlich's, and changed his coat in the picture-frame factory, donned a pair of workmen's slippers. On being asked his name he coolly answered, "Thomas Smith," and volunteered the equally unimportant statement that he was a printer by trade, and resided in First-avenue, between Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets. The mallets, cold-chisels, augers and jimmies used by the thieves were found by the Police. Both the prisoners, on being arraigned at the Tombs yesterday, were held for examination.

The South-Side Railroad Disaster—Inquest on the Victims.

Coroner Whitehead held an inquest yesterday afternoon, in the case of Mrs. Rowe and her son, who died from the effects of injuries received by the disaster on the South-side Railroad on the evening of the 4th instant.

R. A. Braley, a passenger on the train coming from Rockaway, testified that at about 5 o'clock, the train came to the terminus of the double track, and made a halt of some fifteen minutes, and then ran on the single track; in a short time the other train was seen approaching; sand was thrown on the track and the engine reversed; the engines came together, but he could not say whether the whistle was sounded more than once or not; thinks that if Conductor Lynch had used proper precaution the accident would have been avoided; no one was injured except those who had gone out on the platform; if they had kept their seats they would not have been injured; does not think that the conductor did anything to aid the wounded; did not see him after the accident.

John C. Kenahan, a reporter, testified that he was on the down train when the collision occurred. The conductor's name was Rathbone, and with Conductor Lynch appeared to be doing all they could for the injured passengers after the collision. The inquest was then adjourned.
